Supreme Court, U. S.
FILED
JUN 2 1975
MICHAEL RODAK, JR., CLERK

IN THE

Supreme Court of the United States

OCTOBER TERM, 1974.

No. 74-1520

RICHARD J. ELROD, INDIVIDUALLY, AND AS SHERIFF OF COOK COUNTY, ILLINOIS; THE DEMOCRATIC ORGANIZATION OF COOK COUNTY, A CORPORATION; DEMOCRATIC COUNTY CENTRAL COMMITTEE OF COOK COUNTY AND RICHARD J. DALEY, INDIVIDUALLY, AND AS PRESIDENT OF THE DEMOCRATIC ORGANIZATION OF COOK COUNTY AND AS CHAIRMAN OF THE DEMOCRATIC COUNTY CENTRAL COMMITTEE OF COOK COUNTY,

Petitioners,

vs.

JOHN BURNS, FRANK VARGAS, JOSEPH DENNARD, AND FRED BUCKLEY, ON BEHALF OF THEMSELVES AND ALL OTHER PERSONS WHO WERE EMPLOYEES OF THE SHERIFF OF COOK COUNTY ON DECEMBER 7, 1970 AND WHO WERE NOT PROTECTED BY CIVIL SERVICE OR OTHER LAWS AGAINST ARBITRARY DISCHARGE FROM THEIR EMPLOYMENT,

Respondents.

PETITION FOR A WRIT OF CERTIORARI TO THE UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE SEVENTH CIRCUIT.

RAYMOND F. SIMON,
THOMAS A. FORAN,
ROBERT E. WISS,
c/o Foran, Wiss and Schultz,
111 West Washington Street,
Suite 1731,
Chicago, Illinois 60602,
Telephone: 368-8330,
Attorneys for all other Petitioners.

THOMAS A. FORAN,
ROBERT E. WISS,
IAN H. LEVIN,
Of Counsel.

BERNARD CAREY,
State's Attorney of Cook County, Illinois,
500 Chicago Civic Center,
Chicago, Illinois 60602,
Attorney for Richard J. Elrod, Sheriff of Cook County, Illinois, Petitioner.

SHELDON GARDNER,
Deputy State's Attorney,
Civil Actions Bureau,

PAUL P. BIEBEL, JR.,
Assistant State's Attorney,
(312) 443-5460,
Of Counsel.

Gunthorp-Warren Printing Company, Chicago • FInancial 6-6565

INDEX.

PAGE

Report of Opinion 2

Jurisdiction 2

Questions Presented for Review 3

Statement of the Case 4

Argument 6-33

Introduction 6

I. No Constitutional Prohibition Exists Against Discharge of Non-Civil Service Governmental Employees For Political Reasons 7

A. First Amendment Rights Are Not Absolute and Specific Rights Thereunder Are Afforded Differing Degrees of Legal Protection Under Differing Circumstances 7

B. The Freedom of Political Association Per Se. 10

C. Freedom of Political Association and Non-Civil Service Public Employment 12

The Effective Discharge of Duties of the Executive Branch of Government 14

First Amendment Rights of the Public Employer 16

Separation of Powers 18

Political Association 20

Philosophy of Representative Government . 21

D. The Irrational Consequences of the Seventh Circuit Position on the Issue of Freedom of Political Association 23

E. The Patronage System 24

II. A Preliminary Injunction Cannot Properly Be Granted Herein 30

A. If an Injunction Were Granted, Irreparable Injury Would Be Suffered by the Defendants and the General Public 30

B. Federal Equity Power Is Limited by Traditional Principles of Equity Jurisdiction 32

Conclusion 33

Appendix A A1-6

Appendix B A7

CITATIONS.

Alomar v. Dwyer, 447 F. 2d 482 (2d Cir. 1971) 5, 6

American Communications Ass'n. v. Douds, 339 U. S. 382 (1950) 6, 8, 9, 11-15, 29

Am. Fed. of State etc. Employees v. Shapp, 443 Pa. 527, 280 A. 2d 375 (1971) 6, 15

Arnett v. Kennedy, 94 S. Ct. 1633 (1974) 6, 7

Bailey v. Richardson, 182 F. 2d 46 (D. C. Cir. 1950) ... 6

Baker v. Carr, 369 U. S. 186 (1962) 20

Chaplinksky v. New Hampshire, 315 U. S. 568 (1942) .. 8

Cox v. Louisiana, 379 U. S. 536 (1965) 8

Cramp v. Bd. of Public Instruction, 368 U. S. 278 (1961). 10

Eastern Airlines v. Civil Aeronautics Board, 261 F. 2d 830 (2nd Cir. 1958) 30

Gaines Dry Cleaners v. Chicago, 123 F. 2d 104 (7th Cir. 1941) 31

Garner v. Board of Public Works, 341 U. S. 716 (1951) .. 11

Gerende v. Board of Supervisors, 341 U. S. 56 (1951) ... 12

In re Sawyer, 124 U. S. 200 (1888) 32

Illinois State Employees Union v. Lewis, 473 F. 2d 561 (7th Cir. 1972) .....5, 7, 10, 23 passim

Indiana State Employees v. Negley, 365 F. Supp. 225 (S. D. Ind. 1973), aff'd 501 F. 2d 1239 ..... 6, 7

Keyishian v. Board of Regents, 385 U. S. 589 (1967) 10

Moldowsky v. Lindsay, 341 F. Supp. 1393 (S. D. N. Y. 1972) 6

Myers v. United States, 272 U. S. 52 (1926) 18

N. A. A. C. P. v. Button, 371 U. S. 415 (1963) 8

New York, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen & Enginemen, 358 F. 2d 464 (6th Cir. 1966).. 31

Norton v. Blaylock, 409 F. 2d 772 (8th Cir. 1969) 6

Nunnery v. Barber, 503 F. 2d 1349 (4th Cir. 1974)..6, 7, 15, 18

N. L. R. B. v. Montgomery Ward, 157 F. 2d 486 (8th Cir. 1946) 16

O'Brien v. Brown, 409 U. S. 1 21

Precision Inst. Mfg. Co. v. Automotive M. M. Co., 324 U. S. 806 (1945) 32

Progress Development Corp. v. Mitchell, 182 F. Supp. 681 (N. D. Ill. 1960); rev'd in part 286 F. 2d 222 (7th Cir. 1961) 31

Speiser v. Randall, 357 U. S. 513 (1958) 12

United Public Workers v. Mitchell, 330 U. S. 75 (1947) 24-25

United States v. Robel, 389 U. S. (1967) 10, 11

U. S. Civil Service Commission v. National Association of Letter Carriers, 413 U. S. 548 (1973) 9

Vitarell v. Seaton, 359 U. S. 535 (1959) 19

Walton v. House of Representatives, 265 U. S. 487 (1924). 32

Wieman v. Updegraff, 344 U. S. 183 (1952) 10

Yakus v. U. S., 321 U. S. 414 (1944) 31

Young v. Coder, 346 F. Supp. 165 (M. D. Pa. 1972) 6

CONSTITUTION.

United States Constitution, Amendment I, XIV ..5, 7, 8 passim
United States Constitution, Article IV, Section 4 22

OTHER AUTHORITIES.

Couturier, Patronage v. Performance—The Balance Sheet of Civil Service Reform, Good Government (Fall 1967). 27
Douglas, New Republic (July 14, 1952) 26
Farley, Patronage and the New Deal, American Magazine (Sept. 1938) 26
Fish, The Civil Service and The Patronage (2nd pub'n. 1963) 26, 27
Key, Politics, Parties and Pressure Groups (5th ed. 1964).. 29
Lubell, The Future of American Politics (3rd ed. 1965) .. 28
Moynihan and Wilson, Patronage in New York State, 1955-1959, American Political Science Review, vol. 58, no. 2 (June 1964) 28
Schoen, Politics, Patronage and the Constitution, 3 Ind. Leg. F. 35 (1969) 26
White and Smith, Politics and Public Service (1939) 29
Wilson, The Bureaucracy Problem, Public Interest, No. 6 (Winter 1967) 27
Note: Patronage Dismissals: Constitutional Limits and Political Justifications, 41 U. Chi. L. Rev. 297 (1974).. 6
Note: Public Employees—Freedom of Association—Discharge of Non-Policy Making Public Employees' Freedom of Association, 26 Vand. L. Rev. 1090 (1973) 6

IN THE

Supreme Court of the United States

OCTOBER TERM, 1974

No. .....

RICHARD J. ELROD, INDIVIDUALLY, AND AS SHERIFF OF COOK COUNTY, ILLINOIS; THE DEMOCRATIC ORGANIZATION OF COOK COUNTY, A CORPORATION; DEMOCRATIC COUNTY CENTRAL COMMITTEE OF COOK COUNTY AND RICHARD J. DALEY, INDIVIDUALLY, AND AS PRESIDENT OF THE DEMOCRATIC ORGANIZATION OF COOK COUNTY AND AS CHAIRMAN OF THE DEMOCRATIC COUNTY CENTRAL COMMITTEE OF COOK COUNTY,

Petitioners,

vs.

JOHN BURNS, FRANK VARGAS, JOSEPH DENNARD, AND FRED BUCKLEY, ON BEHALF OF THEMSELVES AND ALL OTHER PERSONS WHO WERE EMPLOYEES OF THE SHERIFF OF COOK COUNTY ON DECEMBER 7, 1970 AND WHO WERE NOT PROTECTED BY CIVIL SERVICE OR OTHER LAWS AGAINST ARBITRARY DISCHARGE FROM THEIR EMPLOYMENT,

Respondents.

PETITION FOR A WRIT OF CERTIORARI TO THE UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE SEVENTH CIRCUIT.

Now come the petitioners, Richard J. Elrod, individually and as Sheriff of Cook County, Illinois the Democratic Organization of Cook County, Democratic County Central Committee of Cook County and Richard J. Daley, individually and as President and Chairman of said Organization and Committee, by their attorneys, and pray for the issuance of a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit to review the final order of that court in the above entitled cause, and in support of the petition state as follows:

REPORT OF OPINION.

The opinion of the Court of Appeals is reported in 509 F. 2d 1133 (7th Cir. 1975). A copy thereof is appended hereto as Appendix A.

JURISDICTION.

This petition is filed pursuant to Rule 21 et seq. of the Rules of the Supreme Court of the United States.

(i) The judgment sought to be reviewed was entered on January 30, 1975 (Appendix A).

(ii) The order denying a petition for rehearing was entered on April 24, 1975 (Appendix B).

(iii) Jurisdiction for review herein is conferred by 28 U. S. C. § 1254(1).

QUESTIONS PRESENTED FOR REVIEW.

1. Is there any First Amendment Constitutional prohibition against discharging non-civil service governmental employees for political reasons, bearing in mind that all courts that have considered the question, except the Seventh Circuit, have held no such constitutional prohibition exists.

2. In considering the constitutional "balancing of interests" question here between the private interest in freedom of political association and the public interest in effective unsubverted governmental operation, should the balance be resolved in favor of the public interest because: (1) First Amendment Rights are not absolute and specific rights thereunder receive differing degrees of protection under differing circumstances, and a limitation is essential for the effective discharge of executive governmental office; (2) First Amendment Rights of the public employer; (3) basic concepts of the philosophy of representative government; (4) the doctrines of separation of powers, political questions and justiciability; (5) the irrational consequences of a contrary disposition, and (6) an objective review of the patronage system.

3. Can a preliminary injunction be properly granted where circumstances of grave damage to the public interest in the operation of a governmental office exist.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE.

Each of the individual respondents-plaintiffs was a non-civil service employee of the Sheriff of Cook County, Illinois on or before December 7, 1970, when Richard J. Elrod, a Democrat, replaced Joseph Woods, a Republican, as Sheriff. The respondents-plaintiffs were also active members of the Republican party who actively campaigned and worked for Sheriff Elrod's Republican opponent in the 1970 Sheriff's election. The respondents-plaintiffs were not protected by Civil Service or other laws against summary discharge from their employment. At some point subsequent to December 7, 1970, the date Elrod took office as Sheriff, the respondents-plaintiffs, with one exception, were dismissed from their employment allegedly because they were Republicans and had refused or failed to obtain Democratic sponsorship by agreeing to work for or contribute to the Democratic party. At the time the complaint was filed, the last respondent-plaintiff was allegedly in imminent danger of discharge for the same reason.

The complaint also alleged that Mr. Elrod effected the dismissals of the respondents-plaintiffs "under the direction and control of and in conspiracy" with the petitioners-defendants here, the Democratic Organization of Cook County, Democratic County Central Committee of Cook County and Richard J. Daley, the Chairman of said groups.

The crux of respondents-plaintiffs' complaint was that their dismissals were based upon their political associations and that this violated their rights under the First and Fourteenth Amendments to the Constitution.

Ultimately, the District Court granted petitioners-defendants' motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief may be granted. In reaching this conclusion Judge Bauer expressly relied upon the decision in Alomar v. Dwyer, 447 F. 2d (2nd Cir. 1971) cert. denied 404 U. S. 1020 (1972), which held:

> " '. . . the . . . hard fact is that so far as the Constitution is concerned there is no prohibition against the dismissal of Government employees because of their political beliefs, activities or affiliation' . . . [T]he sole protection for government employees who have been dismissed for political reasons must be found in civil service statutes or regulations." (p. 483)

However, the Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit, relying on its intervening decision in Illinois State Employees Union v. Lewis, 473 F. 2d 561 (1972), reversed, holding that the dismissal of a non-civil service public employee because of his poitical associations is violative of the First and Fourteenth Amendments to the Constitution.

ARGUMENT.

REASONS FOR GRANTING THE WRIT.

Introduction.

Petitioners respectfully urge the Court to grant the writ for the following reasons:

First, the Seventh Circuit in the present cause, and in Lewis, supra, is the only court that has held, and "without direct precedent",[1] that a constitutional prohibition exists against discharging non-civil service governmental employees for political reasons. The Seventh Circuit thus is in direct conflict with the decisions of the Second Circuit, Fourth Circuit, Eighth Circuit, D. C. Circuit, lower federal decisions, decisions of this Court and of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. (Alomar v. Dwyer, 447 F. 2d 482 (2nd Cir. 1971) cert. denied 404 U. S. 1020 (1972); Nunnery v. Barber, 503 F. 2d 1329 (4th Cir. 1974); Norton v. Blaylock, 409 F. 2d 772 (8th Cir. 1969), aff'g. 285 F. Supp. 659, 662, 663; Bailey v. Richardson, 182 F. 2d 46 (D. C. Cir. 1950), affd. 341 U. S. 917; Indiana State Employees Assn., Inc. v. Negley, 365 F. Supp. 225 (D. C. Ind. 1973); Young v. Coder, 346 F. Supp. 165 (M. D. Pa. 1972); Moldawsky v. Lindsay, 341 F. Supp. 1393 (S. D. N. Y. 1972); American Communications Assn. v. Douds, 339 U. S. 382 (1950); Arnett v. Kennedy, 94 S. Ct. 1633, 1660 N. 7 (1974); (American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees v. Shapp, 443 Pa. 527, 280 A. 2d 375 (1971). This Court should grant the writ, to resolve the conflict on this momentous federal constitutional question between the unprecedented position of the Seventh Circuit and the applicable decisions of other federal courts (several since the Lewis case[1a]) and of the Supreme Court.

1. Nunnery v. Barber, 503 F. 2d 1349, 1352 (4th Cir. 1974). Note, Patronage Dismissals: Constitutional Limits and Political Justifications, 41 U. Chi. L. Rev. 297, 316-7 (1974); Note, Public Employees—Freedom of Association—Discharge of Non-Policy Making Public Employees' Freedom of Association, 26 Vand. L. Rev. 1090, 1097 (1973).

Second, the case involves whether there is any Constitutional prohibition against discharging a non-civil service governmental employee for political reasons. Thus an extremely sensitive constitutional "balancing of interests" question is presented between the private interest in freedom of political association, and the public interest in effective governmental office operation (unsubverted by persons of opposite political affiliation). The case and the conflict presented involves a momentous, and even historic, question of federal constitutional law, having far reaching ramifications on the issues of freedom of political association, first amendment rights of the public employer, basic concepts of the philosophy of representative government, separation of powers, political questions, justiciability and an objective review of the patronage system, which have not been but should be settled by the Supreme Court.

Thirdly, the case involves the propriety of injunctive relief in the context of potentially grave injury to the public interest.

I.

NO CONSTITUTIONAL PROHIBITION EXISTS AGAINST DISCHARGING A NON-CIVIL SERVICE GOVERNMENTAL EMPLOYEE FOR POLITICAL REASONS.

A. First Amendment Rights Are Not Absolute and Specific Rights Thereunder Are Afforded Differing Degrees of Legal Protection Under Differing Circumstances.

While First Amendment rights and freedoms are fundamental, they are not in their nature absolute and it has always been recognized that they are properly subject to limitations or restrictions in relation to other legal rights, duties or legally protectible interests. Thus as the Court stated in Chaplinsky v. New Hampshire, 315 U. S. 568, at page 571:

1a. Nunnery v. Barber, supra (1974); Indiana State Employees Assn., Inc. v. Negley, supra (1974); See also: Arnett v. Kennedy, 94 S. Ct. 1633. 1660 N. 7 (1974).

> "Allowing the broadest scope to the language and purpose of the Fourteenth Amendment, it is well understood that the right of free speech is not absolute at all times and under all circumstances." (See also: Cox v. Louisiana, 379 U.S. 536, 554 (1965).

And as the Court stated in American Communications Association v. Douds, 339 U. S. 382, at page 394:

> ". . . it has long been established that these freedoms (First Amendment) themselves are dependent upon the power of constitutional government to survive. If it is to survive it must have power to protect itself . . . Freedom of speech thus does not comprehend the right to speak on any subject at any time." (Emphasis added and insert for clarity.)

Moreover, the Court has held that not all rights under the First Amendment are afforded the same degree of legal protection, and that the degree of protection afforded also varies with the circumstances involved.

Thus, as the Court stated in the Cox case supra (379 U. S. 536) at page 555:

> "We emphatically reject the notion . . . that the First and Fourteenth Amendment afford the same kind of freedom to those who would communicate ideas by conduct . . . as these amendments afford to those who communicate ideas by pure speech." (Emphasis added.)

The opinion below fails to note the distinction between the First Amendment right of freedom of speech per se, and the related but clearly distinguishable right of freedom of political association. The degree of constitutional permissible limitation of these rights in relation to proper government objectives varies widely. As was stated by Mr. Justice Harlan in his separate opinion in N. A. A. C. P. v. Button, 371 U. S. 415 (1963), at page 454:

> "But as we move away from speech alone and into the sphere of conduct—even conduct associated with speech or resulting from it—the area of legitimate governmental interest expands. A regulation not directly suppressing speech or peaceable assembly, but having some impact on the form or manner of their exercise will be sustained if (it) has a reasonable relationship to a proper governmental objective and does not unduly interfere with such individual rights." (Insert for clarity and emphasis added.)

And as the Court stated with respect to the First Amendment freedom of association in the specific context of political affiliations, in American Communications Assn. v. Douds, 339 U. S. 382 (1950) at page 391:

> "The fact that the statute identified persons by their political affiliations and beliefs, which are circumstances ordinarily irrelevant to permissible subjects of government action, does not lead to the conclusion that such circumstances are never relevant." (Emphasis added.)

And as the Court went on to state in Douds, supra, at page 339:

> "We have never held that such freedoms are absolute . . . When a particular conduct is regulated . . . (which) . . . results in an indirect, conditional, partial abridgment of speech, the duty of the courts is to determine which of these two conflicting interest demands the greater protection under the particular circumstances presented." (Insert for clarity and emphasis added.)

If there were any question as to the continued validity of these principles, it was answered by this Court in U. S. Civil Service Commission v. National Association of Letter Carriers, 413 U. S. 548 (1973). The Court stated at page 567:

> "Neither the right to associate nor the right to participate in political activities is absolute in any event. See, e.g., Rosario v. Rockefeller, U.S. (1973); Dunn v. Blumstein, 405 U.S. 330, 336 (1972); Bullock v. Carter, 405 U.S. 134, 140-141 (1972); Jenness v. Fortson, 403 U.S. 431 (1971); Williams v. Rhodes, 393 U.S. 23, 30-31 (1968)."

The opinion below is bottomed essentially on the erroneous assumption that membership in a particular political party is an absolute First Amendment freedom not subject to any limitation. If this were true, then the conditioning of public employment on any political party affiliation consideration would constitute an infringement of First Amendment rights and would be actionable under the "Fourteenth Amendment Right" doctrine. However, as shown above, no First Amendment rights are absolute and all are subject to constitutionally permissible restriction or limitation under certain circumstances. Furthermore, here not pure speech, but more substantively conduct associated therewith speech, is involved. In the context of other paramount considerations which the Seventh Circuit has overlooked (and as will hereafter be noted) the limitation on freedom of association involved in the context of non-civil service employment is completely reasonable in light of the governmental interest involved.

B. The Freedom of Political Association Per Se.

The constitutional concept relied upon by the Seventh Circuit in sustaining the plaintiffs' claims in Lewis, and thus now in this cause, is the freedom of association. The only authorities relied on by the Respondents in Seventh Circuit below relating to political association were the Communist loyalty oath cases.[2] However, these cases do not hold that public employment cannot be conditioned on political party affiliation. They hold that public employment cannot be conditioned on the performance of an act of disclosure of political affiliation, when the performance of the act may subject the employee to criminal sanc- tions and the non-performance subject him to serious stigma.[3] To say that these cases stand for the proposition that public employment cannot be conditioned on political party affiliation incident to the concept of freedom of association is simply a tortured construction of the cases.

2. Wieman v. Updegraff, 344 U. S. 183 (1952); Cramp v. Board of Public Instruction, 368 U. S. 278 (1961); U. S. v. Robel, 389 U. S. 258 (1967); Keyishian v. Board of Regents, 385 U. S. 589 (1967).

More significantly, however, there is specific and explicit authority for the proposition that public employment or benefits, can properly be conditioned on political party affiliation, without impairing the First Amendment freedom of political association. As was pointed out in sub-point A above, this Court specifically held in American Communications v. Douds, 339 U. S. 382 (1950) at page 391:

> "The fact that the statute identifies persons by their political affiliations and beliefs . . . does not lead to the conclusion that such circumstances are never relevant." (Emphasis added.)

Moreover, in the Douds case which specifically dealt with freedom of political association, the Court also characterized restrictions or limitations thereof at page 399, as constituting the regulation of:

> ". . . conduct . . . (which) . . . results in an indirect, conditional, partial abridgement of speech . . ." (Emphasis added.)

While the Douds case is most relevant in the case at bar (as will be discussed hereafter in more detail), it is to be observed that the principle of conditioning public employment or benefits on considerations relating to political party affiliation, and accordingly freedom of association, has also been upheld in other contexts in the cases of Garner v. Board of Public Works,

3. See: Robel case, 389 U. S. 258, 265:
"The act in question put appellee to the choice of surrendering his organizational affiliation . . . or giving up his job. When [he] refused to make that choice, he became subject to a possible criminal penalty or 5 years imprisonment and a $10,000 fine." (Insert for clarity).

341 U. S. 716 and Gerende v. Board of Supervisors, 341 U. S. 56. As this Court itself said in characterizing these cases in Speiser v. Randall, 357 U. S. 513, at page 527:

> "In these cases . . . there was no attempt directly to control speech but rather to protect . . . some interest clearly within the sphere of governmental concern." (Emphasis added.)

The sphere of governmental concerns in the non-civil service or patronage employment area, and the associated right to freedom of association are discussed in the next section.

C. Freedom of Political Association and Non-Civil Service Public Employment.

As shown above, First Amendment rights are not absolute and are properly subject to limitation or restriction in the public interest. The determination of the validity of any particular limitation of the freedom of association turns, as in other cases, on a balancing of interests. As the Court stated in the Douds case with respect to freedom of political association in the context of a particular political party affiliation as a condition of government benefit, page 399:

> "When particular conduct is regulated in the interest of public order, and the regulation results in an indirect, conditional, partial abridgment of speech, the duty of the courts is to determine which of these two conflicting interests demands the greater protection under the particular circumstances presented." (Emphasis added.)

In the Douds case, the Court held that the denial of the government benefit based on the particular political party affiliation did not violate the First Amendment right of freedom of association.

While the political affiliation in the Douds case was that of the communist party, and the context of the issue was rights incident to labor relations, a striking analogy can be drawn between the rationale of valid consideration for the restriction of associational rights or beliefs in Douds and in the case at bar.

Thus, as the Court in Douds stated at page 399:

> ". . . legitimate attempts to protect . . . , not from the . . . possible effects of . . . ideologies, but from present excesses of direct, active conduct are not presumptively bad because they interfere with and, in some of its ramifications, restrain the exercise of First Amendment rights." (Emphasis added).

And as it stated, relative to a restriction on freedom of association based on a particular political party affiliation at page 402:

> ". . . (it) . . . does not prevent or punish by criminal sanctions the making of a speech, the affiliation with any organization, or the holding of any belief."

And as stated at page 403:

> "The 'discouragements' . . . proceed not against the groups or beliefs identified therein, but only against the combination of those affiliations or beliefs with occupancy of a position of . . . power . . ." (Emphasis added).

And as stated at page 404, with respect to the specific limitation:

> ". . . (it) . . . did not restrain the activities of the . . . Party as a political organization; nor did it attempt to stifle beliefs . . . (it) . . . touches only a relative handful of persons, leaving the great majority of persons of the identified affiliations and beliefs completely free from restraint. And it leaves those few who are affected free to maintain their affiliations and beliefs subject only to possible loss of position . . ." (Emphasis added).

And as stated at page 408-9:

> "If the principle that one may under no circumstances be required to state his beliefs on any subject nor suffer the loss of any right or privilege because of his beliefs be a valid one, its application in other possible situations becomes relevant. Suppose, for example, that a federal statute provides that no person may become a member of the Secret Service force assigned to protect the President unless he swears that he does not believe in assassination of the President . . . An affirmative answer hardly commends itself to reason unless, indeed, the Bill of Rights has been converted into a 'suicide pact'". (Emphasis added).

And as the Court most succinctly stated at page 412:

> ". . . (The First Amendment) . . . requires that one be permitted to believe what he will. It requires that one be permitted to advocate what he will unless there is a clear and present danger . . . It does not require that he be permitted to be the keeper of the arsenal. (Insert for clarity and emphasis added).

Thus, it is abundantly clear that the denial of a government benefit based on particular political party affiliation is not per se constitutionally impermissible.

Quite to the contrary, it is permissable when reasonably necessary to protect some interest within the sphere of governmental concern. The necessity of protecting important, indeed, basic and paramount governmental interests in the area of non-civil service employment is unquestionable.

The Effective Discharge of Duties of the Executive Branch of Government.

While it is pleasant to contemplate a utopian society where political party affiliations are sublimated and all parties work together in harmony for the good of the government, unfortunately, this is not the fact of life. In Douds, supra, the Court articulated the dangers of political party affiliation in the context of effective government operations when it stated at page 423:

> "Parties, whether in office or out, are often irresponsible in their use and abuse of freedoms of speech and press. They all make scapegoats of unpopular persons or classes and make promises of dubious sincerity or feasibility in order to win votes. All parties, when in opposition, strive to discredit and embarass the Government of the day by spreading exaggerations and untruths and by inciting prejudice or unreasoning discontent, not even hesitating to injure the Nation's prestige among the family of nations." (Emphasis added).

It was based upon this realistic appraisal of "the facts of political life" that the Court in Douds held that the interest in freedom of political association was properly limited in light of the governmental interest.

Clearly there is no impermissible infringment of first amendment rights incident to conditioning public employment on party affiliation in the non-civil service area, for, as stated in Douds, there is no attempt thereby to stifle ideologies, but rather to protect from "present excesses of direct active conduct" (p. 399); the restriction does not prevent or punish by criminal sanctions (p. 402); the "discouragement" proceeds only against the "combination of affiliations with occupancy of positions of power" (p. 403); it touches only a handful of persons and leaves those few affected "free to maintain their affiliation and beliefs subject only to loss of position" (p. 404). And further, as shown above, any other resolution of the issue converts the Bill of Rights into a "suicide pact" (p. 409) and turns over the keys of the "arsenal" (p. 412).

Also pertinent at this point is the recent statement of the Fourth Circuit in Nunnery v. Barber, 503 F. 2d 1349 (1974). Quoting with approval American Fed. of State etc. Employees v. Shapp, 443 Pa. 527, 280 A. 2d 375 (1971) the Court said:

> "In denying to patronage employees, who had obtained through political affiliation their jobs relief from discharge, the [Shapp] Court stated tersely that those who 'live by the political sword must be prepared to die by the political sword' and, in dying by the political sword, acquire no constitutional right to relief. It phrased its conclusion thus (280 A. 2d at p. 378):
>
> > 'We specifically hold that State employees who obtained their positions (jobs)—as all the parties agree they did—by politics or party patronage, and complain of being fired solely on the grounds of political sponsorship or affiliation, have (1) no . . . Constitutionally protected right to their jobs under (a) either the Federal or (b) the State Constitution . . .'". (pp. 1358, 1359).

First Amendment Rights of the Public Employer.

While the petitioners submit that the above should be dispositive on the issue of the balancing of the interest of freedom of association in the non-civil service employment context, it is to be observed that additional considerations weigh on the side of a constitutionally permissable restraint based on political party affiliation.

While political office is involved herein, the basic relationship of employer-employee exists. The issue of first amendment rights in the context of an employment relationship has arisen in the field of labor relations and is relevant to the case at bar. The leading case is that of N. L. R. B. v. Montgomery Ward, 157 F. 2d 486 (8th Cir. 1946), which involved the balancing of the common law duties and obligations incident to the employment relationship and the reconciliation of the same with first amendment rights. The court held that incident to the employment relationship, the employee owes the duty of care, obedience, allegiance and loyalty (Supra, 157 F. 2d at 496-8). More significantly, however, for the purposes herein, in the context of these duties, it was argued in that case that first amendment rights were violated by the employer incident to certain acts and conduct which constituted unlawful "coercion" of the employees. The acts complained of were, the expression by the employer of his opinion, position, policy or views of matters relating to association activities (unions) during the working hours; compulsory attendance at meetings for discussion and presentation of such matters and of policy between the employer and employees and statements concerning loss of employment or liability of employees for participation in certain employment rights (Supra, at pages 498-500).

In disposing of this argument of "coercion", the court observed that the employer, like the employee, also has first amendment rights which are guaranteed by the constitution. In regard to the employer's rights, the court stated at page 499:

> "The first amendment is concerned with the freedom of thought and expression of the speaker or writer, not with the conditions under which the auditor or listener receives the message. One need not, as a condition precedent to his right of free speech under the first amendment, secure permission of his auditor. The first amendment does not purport to protect the right of privacy, nor does it require that they shall have volunteered to listen . . . speech is very frequently invoked as a means to persuade those who do not agree with the speaker and may not even wish to hear him." (Emphasis added).

In expressing the rationale of the decision the Court succinctly stated at page 500:

> "The first amendment is intended to assure a privilege that in itself must be so actual and certain that fear and doubt are absent from the individuals mind, or the freedom is but an abstraction. If the speaker must hesitate before uttering his thoughts, if he must weigh and nicely balance every word so as to determine whether what he is about to say is permitted or forbidden, the guaranty tendered by the Constitution is little more than theoretical. He is wholly at the mercy of the varied understanding of his hearers and consequently of whatever inference may be drawn as to his intent and meaning. Such a distinction offers no security for free discussion, Thomas v. Collins, supra. If subtleties may be invoked as the basis for any inference that non-coercive remarks may have had an 'altered import' in the minds of the listeners, any employer would be subjected not only to the varied understanding of his hearers, but also subjected to the chance of what the board may infer. We think such a doctrine would take away all security for free discussion." (Emphasis added).

The public executive officer obviously has no worse rights with regard to expecting and demanding the common law duty owed by an employee as any private employer. It would not seem necessary to note that partisan political party consideration are of the essence in employment in the elective-appointive public office and a matter vitally touching the interest of the public employer. More significantly the public officer has the right of freedom of speech as to political matters and historically, the legal right to condition public employment on political considerations. The destructive effect on these rights would be palpable if the officer could not utter his thoughts, or exercise the right incident to his office, without being "wholly at the mercy of the varied understanding of the employee, and consequently of whatever inference may be drawn as to his intent and meaning." (Montgomery Ward, supra). If respondent's position in this case is upheld, the concerns so well expressed by Judge Campbell in Illinois State Employee Union, Council 34, AFL-CIO v. Lewis, 473 F. 2d 561 (7th Cir. 1972), cert. den., Feb. 20, 1973, are certain to occur. As judge Campbell predicts if "Any and all such employees who are discharged can state an actionable claim in the federal district court by simply alleging . . . that the discharge was caused by political party affiliations or activities," the courts indeed will become "super civil service commisions." The Fourth Circuit in Nunnery, was thus moved just last year to state:

> "We find convincing the point that the delineation between the employees who are and who are not protected from patronage discharge poses an issue which should be resolved legislatively, not judicially . . ." (503 F. 2d at 1356).

The "chilling" effect on the public employer's right of freedom of speech and political association is manifest.

Separation of Powers.

While the discharge of duties of public office and efficient administration are perhaps the most immediate and devastating effects of the decision below some additional effects are to be noted.

Incident to the fundamental doctrine of separation of powers, it has long been recognized that executive office carries with it the power of appointment or removal at will. In the case of Myers v. United States, 272 U. S. 52 (1926), the Court passed upon the unrestricted right and power of the chief executive to remove his appointee. It held that the right and power was implied from those constitutional provisions which establish where the executive power is vested (272 U. S. at 163-4) and the duty to faithfully execute the law (272 U. S. at 164). The reasoning of the Court reflects the public interest considerations involved in this right and power. The Court stated at page 117, that the chief executive:

> ". . . alone and unaided could not execute the laws. He must execute them by the assistance of subordinates . . . even in the absence of expressed words . . . as part of his executive power he should select those who were to act for him . . . in the execution of the laws . . . as his selection of administrative officers is essential to the execution of the laws . . ., so must be his power of removing those for whom he cannot continue to be responsible."

The Myers case is particularly significant with respect to the case at bar since the case revolved around the federal tenure of office act which was passed during President Andrew Johnson's administration because of, as the Court states in Myers at page 151:

> "The alleged general use of patronage for political purposes by the President."

Moreover, as one of the reasons for its decision establishing the absolute power of removal in the chief executive the court in Myers stated at page 164:

> ". . . to hold otherwise would make it impossible. . . in case of political . . . differences . . . to take care that the laws be faithfully executed."

It is to be noted that the Myers case has never been overruled or even modified by the Supreme Court. This principle preceded the Myers case[4] and has been followed since.[5]

4. Crenshaw v. United States, 134 U. S. 99, 108, 10 S. Ct. 431, 434 (1890); Keim v. United States, 177 U. S. 290, 20 S. Ct. 574 (1900); Taylor and Marshall v. Beckham (No. 1), 178 U. S. 548, 575, 20 S. Ct. 890 (1905).

5. Vitarelli v. Seaton, 359 U. S. 539, 79 S. Ct. 968 (1959).

Political Question.

While the area of technical justiciability is considered to have been broadened by the case of Baker v. Carr, 369 U. S. 186 (1962), the precise rationale of the opinions rendered in the Baker case would weigh on the side of non-intervention by the judiciary in this specific area.

In Baker v. Carr, Mr. Justice Douglas, with the majority, concedes at page 245:

> "There are, of course, some questions beyond judicial competence. Where the performance of a 'duty' is left to the discretion and good judgment of an executive officer, the judiciary will not compel the exercise of his discretion one way or the other, . . . for to do so would be to take over the office."

Mr. Justice Clark, with the majority gives a very persuasive reason why he would not have voted as he did in Baker v. Carr if the design of the State's voting districts had not been completely irrational. At pages 258 and 259 he states:

> "Although I find the Tennessee apportionment statute offends the Equal Protection Clause, I would not consider intervention by this Court into so delicate a field if there were any other relief available to the people of Tennessee. But the majority of the people of Tennessee have no practical opportunities for exerting their political weight at the polls to correct the existing "invidious discrimination." (Emphasis added).

Mr. Justice Stewart, with the majority, at page 265 concedes that it is the "irrational" basis of Tennessee's voting districts that generated the Supreme Court's power to interfere.

Mr. Justice Frankfurter, in his dissent in Baker v. Carr stated at page 267:

> "Disregard of inherent limits in the effective exercise of the Court's judicial power' . . . presages the futility of judicial intervention in the essentially political conflict of forces by which the relation between population and representation has time out of mind been and now is determined."

And stated at page 270:

> "There is not under our Constitution a judicial remedy for every political mischief . . . The Framers carefully and with deliberate forethought refused so to enshrine the judiciary . . . appeal for relief does not belong here. Appeal must be to an informed, civically militant electorate. In a democratic society like ours, relief must come through an aroused popular conscience that sears the conscience of the people's representatives."

And stated at page 287:

> "What renders cases of this kind nonjudiciable is not necessarily the nature of the parties to them, for the Court has resolved other issues between similar parties; nor is it the nature of the legal question involved, for the same type of question has been adjudicated when presented in other forms of controversy. The crux of the matter is that courts are not fit instruments of decision where what is essentially at stake is the composition of those large contests of policy traditionally fought out in non-judicial forums, by which government and the actions of government are made and unmade." (Emphasis added) (See also: O'Brien v. Brown, 409 U. S. 1, 92 S. Ct. 2718, 2720 (1972)).

From the above, it would appear fair to observe that the absence of any non-judicial effective relief by a "majority of the people" was the sine qua non of the Baker decision on justiciability. It would seem unnecessary to note that a "majority of the people" have effective relief against an elected official who does not do a job of hiring and firing satisfactory to the people —they vote him out of office.

Philosophy of Representative Government.

As was stated by Mr. Justice Douglas in the Baker case, at page 245:

> "Where the performance of a 'duty' is left to the discretion and good judgment of an executive officer, the judiciary will not compel the exercise of his discretion one way or the other . . . for to do so would be to take over the office." (Emphasis added).

This statement is but a reflection of the American philosophy of representative government. The people elect their representatives to carry out the function of office. The majority of the people make the selection of the man they wish to assume that office and he is vested with those indefinite, administrative responsibilities and discretion of executive office. The governmental system provides the sanction for his failure to exercise them to the satisfaction of the people—removal from office at the next election.

The majority of the people did not select the judiciary to perform those functions, nor to control the executive in the exercise of those functions. Insofar as the exercise of those functions do not infringe on constitutional rights, the control thereof by the judiciary is tantamount to "taking over" the office and more significantly, depriving the electorate of its only sanction for the unsatisfactory performance of executive office to wit, non re-election.

The caveat of Justice Frankfurter in Baker v. Carr, supra, at page 749 is relevant in this regard:

> "The influence of those converging considerations—the caution not to undertake decisions where standards meet for judicial judgment are lacking, the reluctance to interfere with matters of state government in the absence of an unquestionable and effectively enforceable mandate, the unwillingness to make courts arbiters of the broad issues of political organization historically committed to other institutions and for whose adjustment the judicial process is ill adapted—has been decisive of the settled line of cases, reaching back more than a century, which holds that Art. IV, Sec. 4 of the Constitution, guaranteeing to the States 'a Republician Form of Government is not enforcible through the courts.' "

It would seem persuasive, that if the judiciary does not enforce the guarantee of Article IV, Section 4 of the Constitution, it should abstain from any possible impairment of the institutions, sanctions or natural operations thereof.

D. The Irrational Consequences of the Seventh Circuit Position on the Issue of Freedom of Political Association.

As heretofore noted, the position of the Seventh Circuit stands in stark conflict with that of four other circuits. The unsoundness of the Seventh Circuit position is further highlighted by the irrational consequences which are effected by that position.

In a separate opinion by Judge Campbell in the Lewis case (473 F. 2d 576-9) some of these consequences are noted. First, it was observed that the impact of the position is to thrust the federal courts into the administration and daily operations of state and local government, converting the federal judiciary into a "super civil service commission" for all state and local employees not covered by civil service law. It was estimated that the number of trials and appeals which could arise incident to the Lewis case alone, from one department of a State and one change of administration in that department totalled almost 2,000. As Judge Campbell stated, the volume of potential federal litigation resulting "truly becomes catastrophic".

In addition the difficulty in fashioning appropriate and workable judicial standards for distinguishing between "policy making" and "non-policy making" positions is obvious. Moreover, it results in the constitutional rights of individuals being governed by the nature of their employment and accordingly the establishment of a doctrine of a "sliding scale" of constitutional rights according to rank, title, job description or duties, and whether in or out of government.

Finally Judge Campbell noted the vexing problem which emerges concerning the "burden of proof" standard in such cases. This results from the fact that since a "civil service system" cannot be judicially imposed on a state or local government, the public employer cannot be compelled to explain the reasons for termination of employment.

While other examples of irrational results could be catalogued, it would seem that the basic falacy in the "policy"—"non-policy making" distinction created by the Seventh Circuit, lies in its implicit assumption that loyalty is only important to effective execution of governmental office at the high eschelons of employment. We would submit in this regard that while the General and his Staff map the strategy, it is the soldier in the field who fights the battle. It would seem manifest that loyalty at the "battle field" level is as important and indeed essential as at the "headquarters" level!

E. The Patronage System.

The patronage system per se is not "on trial" in the case at bar. It would, however, be naive to think that the popular conception of the "evils" of that system are not a factor bearing upon the resolution of the true issue herein. Accordingly, the following observation and authorities are submitted relative to the "system" and, the question of the functions of the judiciary in respect thereto.

It is fundamental that social or political reform is not the proper function of the judiciary, but rather is the function of the executive or legislative branches of government. As this Court itself stated in discussing the role of the judiciary in the context of political activities and the patronage system in particular in United Public Workers v. Mitchell, 330 U. S. 75 at page 89:

> "As is well known the federal courts established pursuant to Article III of the Constitution do not render advisory opinions. For adjudication of constitutional issues 'concrete legal issues, presented in actual cases, not abstraction' are requisite. This is as true of declatory judgments as any other field. These appellants seem clearly to seek advisory opinions upon board claims of rights protected by the First, Fifth, Ninth and Tenth Amendments to the Constitution."

> "The Constitution allots the nation's judicial power to the federal courts. Unless these courts respect the limits of that unique authority, they intrude upon powers vested in the legislative or executive branches. Judicial adherence to the doctrine of the separation of powers preserves the courts for the decision of issues between litigants, capable of effective determination. Judicial exposition upon political proposals is permissible only when necessary to decide definite issues between litigants. When the courts act continually within these constitutionally imposed boundaries of their power, their ability to perform their function as a balance for the people's protection against abuse of power by other branches of government remains unimpaired. Should the courts seek to expand their power so as to bring under their jurisdiction ill defined controversies over Constitutional issues, they would become the organ of political theories."

And in discussing the proper branch of government for the resolution of questions involving the patronage system, public employment and political activities, the court stated in Mitchell, supra, at page 99:

> "Congress and the President are responsible for an efficient public service. If, in their judgment, efficiency may be best obtained by prohibiting active participation by . . . employees in politics as party officers or workers, we see no constitutional objection."

And as the court further stated with respect to the need or the extent of the regulation of political activities of public employees, at page 102:

> "The use of the constitutional power of regulation is for Congress, not for the courts . . ."
>
> "The determination of the extent to which political activities of governmental employees shall be regulated lies primarily with Congress."

Abraham Lincoln, as well as our founding fathers, Washington, Adams and Jefferson, were unequivocally committed to the proposition that under our form of government, executive office must posesss the power of appointment and removal based on considerations of political party, philosophies or beliefs. (Fish, The Civil Service and the Patronage, (2nd pub'n. 1963) pp. 7, 13, 23, 27, 172).

Moving into modern times, relative to the Roosevelt administration in 1930's, it is stated in Farley, Patronage And The New Deal, American Magazine (Sept. 1938), at page 76:

> "Some of the greatest troubles the President has had were caused by subordinate officials who were in sharp disagreement with his policies and, rightly or wrongly, were sabotaging the job he was trying to acomplish."

And as the author stated at page 78:

> "To my way of thinking . . . [the patronage system] is the most democratic way of all and, in the long run, the best way of getting competent people." (Insert for clarity and emphasis added).

In even more contemporary times, then Senator Paul H. Douglas of Illinois had comments on the patronage system. In Douglas, New Republic, July 14, 1952, it is stated at page 4:

> "In short, I am for civil service but not for having civil service dominate public employment 100 percent. That would give us the bureaucracy of Germany and France which I do not regard as ideal."
>
> "But I would like to have you consider just how long most liberals would be able to last in Congress if you stripped us of all patronage, as you desire. We who try to defend the interests of the people, the consumers and the taxpayers commonly face the powerful opposition of the special interest groups which will spend enormous sums of money to defeat us . . . If we are to survive we need some support rooted in gratitude for material fovors which at the same time do not injure the general public."

Another aspect of "special interest groups" and the patronage system comes into play in the context of the argument that the taxpayer bears the cost of political parties through the system. However, as is stated in Schoen, Politics, Patronage and The Constitution, 3 Ind. L. F. 35 at page 64, footnote 103:

> "The patronage system seemingly makes the taxpayer contribute to a party without his consent, for it is the taxpayers money that pay the employee's salaries. But it is better than having the party totally committed to people who own oil wells or airlines." (Emphasis added).

The argument has also been advocated that the abolition of the patronage system would improve the quality of government through career employees. Fish, supra, makes the following observation in this regard at page 233:

> "(under patronage) . . . any positions might lead anywhere, and that quickly; removal was constantly impending; government service was speculative, and because of the opportunities it afforded attracted clever, sometimes brilliant, men. Now (under civil service) it offers, in the main, the advantage of steady, light employment at a moderate remuneration and attracts the steady-going and unimaginative." (Insert and emphasis added).

To the same effect is the author's conclusion in Wilson, "The Bureaucracy Problem", Public Interest No. 6 (Win. 1967), where it is stated at page 5:

> "To be responsive, one must be willing to run risks, and the career civil service is not ordinarily attractive to people with a taste for risk."

Another area of contrast between the patronage system and its alternative is reflected in an article by Jean J. Couturier, the Executive Director of the National Civil Service League. In Couturier, "Patronage Versus Performance—The Balance Sheet of Civil Service Reform", Good Government, Fall 1967, the author states at page 15:

> "Public employment was historically considered a sacred trust. It has also been thought of as a training ground for the disadvantaged and a source of employment for the needy. Further, as distinguished from the area of political patronage, it has been thought of as a place to reward those who have done great service to their society. There is pressing need to rethink these concept if we are to have > the most efficient possible public service. If it is desirable to in some way make public employment a social tool, such as through veterans' preference or residence requirements, the scope and methods of so doing must be evaluated and the limits defined."

And in further discussing the results of overemphasis on civil service systems, he states:

> "Ironically, merit systems have all too often been perverted to protect and provide a sanctuary for those on payroll. While development of career concepts is fundamental to the success of any large enterprise, these concepts should not be manipulated to prevent entry of competent people. All too often civil service selection systems are effectively closed corporations."

It is ironic that in these very areas where the civil service fails, a decently run patronage system excels: 1) opportunity and training ground for the disadvantaged; 2) a source of employment for the needy; 3) the disabled veteran; 4) veterans' preference; 5) residence requirements for broad based representation in public office. Samuel Lubell has also commented on this aspect of the patronage system. In Lubell, The Future of American Politics, Third Edition, 1965, he states at page 85:

> "Patronage is peculiarly important for minority groups, involving much more than the mere spoils of office. Each first appointment given a member of any underdog element is a boost in that element's struggle for social acceptance. It means that another barrier to their advance has been lifted, another shut door has swung open."

And as is stated in Moynihan and Wilson, "Patronage in New York State, 1955-1959", Amer. Pol. Sci. Rev., Vol. 58, No. 2 (June 1964), at page 296:

> 'Recognizing certain groups in the community by appointing some of their members to office has long been thought to be a principal function of patronage."

Still other observations on the patronage system can be noted.

In White and Smith, Politics and Public Service (1939) it is stated at page 85:

> "Professor William Y. Elliott, of Harvard University, who sees no alternative to executive leadership but who hates the purchase of consent by patronage, can find no other means of securing effective political leadership except by a complete abandonment of the whole presidential system in favor of cabinet government on the English model. Thus greatly rises the price of freedom from patronage—and there is ground for doubt whether even this change would produce the desired result.

In Key, Politics, Parties and Pressure Groups (5th Ed. 1964), the author states at page 369:

> "The truth is that we have contrived no system for the support of party that does not place considerable reliance on patronage. The party organization makes a democratic government work and charges a price for its services. Sometimes it becomes corrupt and levies an exorbitant charge. Fortunately not all political organizations are corrupt, and over the long run the spoils system has come to operate within narrower bounds. Yet until we invent some other system of political financing or new incentives for party service, the government, directly or indirectly, will contribute to the support of party activity."

While the above is just a sampling of the literature on the patronage system, it is submitted that it represents an objective summary. While the patronage system has produced some abuses, it has also performed significant social, economic and political functions. To abolish it for the former, and in spite of the latter again brings to mind the words of Justice Frankfurter, who noted in the Douds case, at page 419:

> ". . . one should not throw out the baby with the bath or burn the house in order to roast the pig." (Emphasis added).

As noted earlier, the problems involved are legislative in nature and to date no satisfactory substitute has been conceived by man.

II.

A PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION CANNOT PROPERLY BE GRANTED HEREIN.

The Court of Appeals essentially held that since there was a reasonable probability of respondents prevailing on the merits, a preliminary injunction could properly be granted. In so doing, the court ignored the unique issue of public interest herein and traditional principles of federal equity power.

A. If an Injunction Were Granted, Irreparable Injury Would Be Suffered by the Defendants and the General Public.

In considering whether a preliminary injunction shall issue, the court must also consider whether an injunction will cause substantial harm to the defendant or to the public. Eastern Airline v. Civil Aeronautics Board, et al., 261 F. 2d 830 (2nd Cir. 1958). The harm resulting from an injunction in this case will substantially injure the public generally as well as the defendants, because an injunction would seriously curtail the effectiveness of a major Cook County law enforcement office. If an injunction issued, the court would be required to hold hearings to review each and every instance of hiring, firing, promoting or demotion in the Sheriff's Office during the pendency of the injunction in each instance where the plaintiffs alleged political considerations were involved in the action. In those cases where the basis for hiring or firing involved confidential and privileged law enforcement information, such confidential information would have to be disclosed in order to explain the reason for the hiring or discharge. The damages to the defendants and the public are so prevading that it is not possible to ascertain the amount of bond that would have to be posted by the plaintiffs in compliance with Rule 65(c) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.

The factors which the courts consider in granting injunctive relief in equity litigation between private parties differ from those considered in actions for injunctive relief where the public interest is involved. Chief Justice Stone in Yakus v. United States, 321 U. S. 414, 64 S. Ct. 660 (1944) stated:

> "When an injunction is asked which will adversely affect a public interest for whose impairment, even temporary, an injunctive bond cannot compensate, the court may in the public interest withhold relief until a final determination of the rights of the parties, though the postponement may be burdensome to the plaintiff . . . this is but another application of the principle, declared in Virginia R. Co. v. System Federation, 300 U. S. 515, 552, 57 S. Ct. 592, 81 L. Ed 789, that 'courts of equity may, and frequently do, go much further both to give and withhold relief in furtherance of the public interest, than they are accustomed to go when only private interests are involved.' " (Emphasis added.)

In Gaines Dry Cleaners v. City of Chicago, 123 F. 2d 104 (7th Cir. 1941) the plaintiff sought to restrain the City of Chicago from interfering with the operations of its business. In affirming the trial court denial of the motion for an injunction the court stated:

> "A federal court will rarely interfere, through temporary (or permanent) injunction, with the conduct of municipal government by the city's administrative officers." Page 105.

Injunctive relief is an awesome power New York C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Brotherhood of Local Firemen & Enginemen, 358 F. 2d 464, 469 (6th Cir. 1966) and a drastic remedy requiring courts to proceed with caution before granting such relief. Progress Development Corp. v. Mitchell, 182 F. Supp. 681, 711 (N. D. Ill. 1960), rev. in part on other grounds 286 F. 2d 222 (7th Cir. 1961). If such relief were granted in this case, the public, rather than the plaintiffs, would be irreparably injured.

B. Federal Equity Power Is Limited by Traditional Principles of Equity Jurisdiction.

The suit herein is, in essence, an action for equitable relief against a state officer with respect to acts relating to public employment in an elected state office.

The restrictions of federal equity power in such matters and the limitation to traditional powers of equity cannot be questioned.

As was stated in the case of In re Sawyer, 124 U. S. 200 (1887) at page 212:

> "It is equally well settled that a court of equity has no jurisdiction over the appointment and removal of public officers, whether the power of removal is vested, as well as that of appointment, in executive or administrative boards or officers, or is intrusted to a judicial tribunal."

And as the Court further stated (in quoting from an Illinois Supreme Court decision) at page 214:

> ". . . nor do matters of a political nature come within the jurisdiction of the court of chancery . . ."

In the case of Walton v. House of Representatives, 265 U. S. 487, a claim of improper removal from state office by state officers was involved and the charge that the removal was prompted by "wrongful motive and prejudice" and that removal would effect "a denial of . . . due process and equal protection . . . under the Fourteenth Amendment . . ." The court stated at page 490:

> "A court of equity has no jurisdiction over the appointment and removal of public officers . . . and particularly are the courts of the United States, sitting as courts of equity, without jurisdiction over the appointment and removal of state officers. . . ."

In addition the equitable maxim of clean hands is particularly applicable herein. As the Supreme Court stated in Precision Inst. Mfg. Co. v. Automative M. M. Co., 324 U. S. 806, 814-15 (1945):

> "The guiding doctrine in this case is the equitable maxim that "he who comes into equity must come with clean hands." This maxim is far more than a mere banality. It is a self-imposed ordinance that closes the doors of a court of equity to one tainted with inequitableness or bad faith relative to the matter in which he seeks relief, however improper may have been the behavior of the defendant. That doctrine is rooted in the historical concept of court of equity as a vehicle for affirmatively enforcing the requirements of conscience and good faith. This presupposes a refusal on its part to be "the abetter of iniquity." Bein v. Heath, 6 How. 228, 247, 12 L. Ed. 416."

In the case at bar the plaintiffs seek equitable relief for the protection of their employment because of assertedly improper, unlawful and reprehensible conduct and practices on the part of the defendants, and yet, plaintiffs admit that they obtained their employment by virtue of the same conduct, practices and indeed the "system" which they so forcefully condemn.

CONCLUSION.

Wherefore, since the decision below involves a momentous, far reaching question of federal constitutional law which should be settled by this Court, and the decision below is in direct conflict with the decisions of other federal Courts of Appeal on this same matter, it is prayed that this Petition for a Writ of Certiorari be granted.

Respectfully submitted,

RAYMOND F. SIMON,
THOMAS A. FORAN,
ROBERT E. WISS,
c/o Foran, Wiss and Schultz,
111 West Washington Street,
Suite 1731,
Chicago, Illinois 60602,
Telephone: 368-8330,
Attorneys for all other Petitioners.

THOMAS A. FORAN,
ROBERT E. WISS,
IAN H. LEVIN,
Of Counsel.

BERNARD CAREY,
State's Attorney of Cook County,
Illinois,
500 Chicago Civic Center,
Chicago, Illinois 60602,
Attorney for Richard J. Elrod, Sheriff of Cook County, Illinois, Petitioner.

SHELDON GARDNER,
Deputy State's Attorney,
Civil Actions Bureau,

PAUL P. BIEBEL, JR.,
Assistant State's Attorney,
(312) 443-5460,
Of Counsel.

APPENDIX.

EXHIBIT A.

IN THE UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS
For the Seventh Circuit.

JOHN BURNS, et al.,
Plaintiffs-Appellants,

Nos. 71-1785, 72-1541 vs.

RICHARD J. ELROD, individually and as Sheriff of Cook County, Illinois, et al.,
Defendants-Appellees.

Appeal from the United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division—No. 71 C 607.
JULIUS J. HOFFMAN, Judge, WILLIAM J. BAUER, Judge.

Argued October 23, 1973—Decided January 30, 1975.

Before KILEY, *Senior Circuit Judge; CAMPBELL, *Senior District Judge; and GRANT, Senior District Judge.

CAMPBELL, Senior District Judge. Plaintiffs appeal from two orders of the United States District Court for the Northern

---

* Senior Circuit Judge Roger J. Kiley, deceased, did not participate in the decision in this case.

 Senior District Judge William J. Campbell of the Northern District of Illinois is sitting by designation.

 Senior District Judge Robert A. Grant of the Northern District of Indiana is sitting by designation.

District of Illinois, the first denying their motion for a preliminary injunction and the second dismissing their complaint for failure to state a claim upon which relief might be granted. We reverse and remand the cause for further proceedings not inconsistent with the views expressed herein.

The individual plaintiffs, with one exception, were employees of the Office of the Sheriff of Cook County, Illinois, on and before December 7, 1970. They were not protected by Civil Service or other laws against summary discharge from their employment. Subsequent to December 7, 1970, the date on which Richard J. Elrod took office as Sheriff of Cook County, these plaintiffs were fired, allegedly because they were either members of the Republican rather than the Democrat Party, did not have the requisite political sponsorship from the Democrat Party or because they failed to pledge their political allegiance to, work for or contribute to the Democrat Party. Sheriff Elrod is alleged to be a Democrat. Plaintiff Fred Buckley, at the time the complaint was filed, was still employed by the Sheriff in Cook County, but alleged that he was in "imminent danger" of being fired for the same reasons that allegedly caused the other plaintiffs' dismissals.

The defendants include Richard J. Elrod, Sheriff of Cook County, at whose direction the dismissals are claimed to have been made; Richard J. Daley, President of the Democratic Organization of Cook County and Chairman of the Democratic County Central Committee of Cook County; the Democratic Organization of Cook County; and the Democratic County Central Committee of Cook County. Plaintiffs charged that Mr. Daley and the defendant organizations were also responsible for the dismissals of plaintiffs, alleging that Mr. Elrod effected the dismissals "under the direction and control of and in conspiracy" with these defendants.

The gravamen of plaintiffs' complaint is that, because their dismissals were based upon their political association and beliefs, defendants' conduct violated their rights under the First and Fourteenth Amendments of the Constitution of the United States. As relief, plaintiffs prayed for a declaration of their rights, compensatory and punitive damages, and preliminary and permanent injunctions restraining defendants from conditioning plaintiffs employment on constitutionally impermissible grounds, restraining further dismissals on such grounds and ordering reinstatement for unlawfully dismissed employees.

On the grounds that loss of employment did not constitute a sufficient showing of irreparable injury and that plaintiffs had an adequate remedy at law, Judge Hoffman denied the plaintiffs' motion for a preliminary injunction. Subsequently, Judge Bauer granted defendants' motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief might be granted. In reaching this conclusion, Judge Bauer relied upon the decision of the Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit in Alomar v. Dwyer, 447 F. 2d 482 (1971), cert. denied 404 U. S. 1020 (1972). Alomar concluded that there was no constitutional prohibition against the dismissal of governmental employees because of their political affiliations or beliefs.

Subsequent to these orders of the district court, this Circuit announced its decision in Illinois State Employees Union v. Lewis, 473 F. 2d 561 (1972), cert. denied, 410 U. S. 943 (1973) which refused to follow the reasoning in Alomar, holding instead that the dismissal of a public employee, not otherwise protected by Civil Service, because of his or her political associations or beliefs violates the First and Fourteenth Amendments of the Constitution of the United States. Although defendants argue that Lewis was wrongly decided and invite our reconsideration thereof,[1] we decline to do so for the scholarly and persuasive reasons articulated in Judge Stevens opinion in Lewis.[2] Plaintiffs' allegations that they were fired or threatened with dismissal because they belonged to a political party other than that of the office holder's political party, state a legally cognizable claim entitling them to an opportunity to prove their case.

1. See, Nunnery v. Barber, 503 F. 2 1349 (4th Cir. 1974).

2. See also, Note, Patronage Dismissals: Constitutional Limits and Political Justifications, 41 U. Chi. L. Rev. 297 (1974).

Defendant Elrod resists this conclusion on the ground that under the rationale of Lewis, the plaintiffs occupy "policy-making" positions as a matter of law. It is maintained that the plaintiffs were deputy sheriffs and that, under Illinois law, this makes them public officials rather than public employees. Lewis recognized "the public executives right to use political philosophy or affiliation as one criteria in the selection of policy-making officials" and that "considerations of personal loyalty, or other factors besides determination of policy, may justify the employment of political associates in certain positions." Illinois State Employees Union v. Lewis, 473 F. 2d 561, 574 (1972). These factors were characterized as a justification for an otherwise impermissible dismissal.

Defendant Elrod reasons that since deputy sheriffs are public officials their dismissal for partisan political reasons is justified under Lewis. We fail to see how the label "public official" or "public employee" advances the real inquiry on whether the particular employee was "engaged directly or indirectly in the formulation or implementation of policies" of the governmental office or agency involved. Illinois State Employee Union v. Lewis, 473 F. 2d 561, 578 (Campbell, J., concurring) (1972). The "justification" or defense turns on the specific duties and responsibilities of the particular employee, not his title. Moreover, it appears that the basis for describing deputy sheriffs as "public officials" no longer exists in Illinois, as Section 9 of Article X of the 1870 Constitution of Illinois was not carried over into the 1970 Constitution of Illinois. We conclude, therefore, that the issue of whether plaintiffs were policy-making employees who may be dismissed for partisan political reasons is a matter of factual defense to be established by defendants at trial.[3]

We consider next the question concerning the denial of plaintiffs motion for a preliminary injunction. The district court's order, by holding that the loss of employment does not constitute sufficient irreparable harm and that the plaintiffs have an adequate remedy at law, suggests that a preliminary injunction would never be appropriate in this type of case. We must reject this conclusion, for clearly more is involved than a simple loss of employment. What lies at the heart of these cases is the constitutional right of governmental employees to associate freely with political groups of their choice without official reprisal for such affiliation. See Illinois State Employees Union v. Lewis, 473 F. 2d 561 (1972), cert. denied, 410 U. S. 943 (1973); Kiiskila v. Nichols, 433 F. 2d 745 (7th Cir. 1970). Inasmuch as this case involves First Amendment rights of association which must be carefully guarded against infringement by public office holders, we judge that injunctive relief is clearly appropriate in these cases. Since, under Lewis, plaintiffs have made a sufficient showing of probability of success on the merits, the cause is remanded to the district court with instructions to enter appropriate preliminary injunctive relief during the pendency of this cause.

The complaint here was filed by plaintiffs "on behalf of themselves and all other persons who were employees of the Sheriff of Cook County on December 7, 1970 and who were not protected by Civil Service or other laws against arbitrary discharge from their employment." The district court made no determination regarding the appropriateness of the class action vehicle. As in Lewis, we observe that:

> "Whether the district court should now determine that a class action is appropriate, or if so, how the class or classes should be defined, either for discovery or trial purposes, are matters best apprised by the district court in the first instance." Illinois State Employees Union v. Lewis, 473 F. 2d 561, 576 (1972).

3. See e.g., Indiana State Employees Ass'n, Inc. v. Negley, 365 F. Supp. 225 (S. D. Ind. 1973), aff'd 501 F. 2d 1239 (7th Cir. 1974).

Although the class action question must first be determined by the district court, we perceive some threshold difficulties attending that determination. While questions of law may be common to class members, factual issues relating to the reasons for discharge may vary depending upon the individual, as may the asserted justification that an individual occupied a policy making position. Finally, assuming plaintiffs can establish liability, the issue of appropriate relief may depend upon factual matters unique to various members of the asserted class. In making these observations, we express no views on the district court's ultimate determination of the class action issue. Rather, they are intended to illustrate the topics of inquiry that will doubtless occupy the district judge's attention on remand.

For the reasons stated, the two orders of the district court appealed from are reversed and the cause is remanded to the district court for further proceedings not inconsistent herewith.

REVERSED AND REMANDED.

EXHIBIT B.

UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS
For the Seventh Circuit.
Chicago, Illinois 60604.

April 24, 1975.

Before

HON. WILLIAM J. CAMPBELL, SR., District Judge
HON. ROBERT A. GRANT, SR., District Judge

JOHN BURNS,
Plaintiffs-Appellants,

vs.

No. 71-1285, 72-1541

RICHARD J. ELROD, etc., et al.,
Defendants-Appellees.

Appeal from the United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division. (71 C 607)

On consideration of the petition for rehearing and suggestion that it be reheard en banc filed in the above-entitled cause, no judge in active service having requested a vote thereon, nor any judge having voted to grant the suggestion, and all of members of the panel having voted to deny a rehearing,

IT IS ORDERED that the petition for a rehearing in the above-entitled cause be, and the same is hereby, DENIED.

Supreme Court, U. S.
FILED
DEC 4 1975
MICHAEL RODAK, JR., CLERK

APPENDIX.

IN THE

Supreme Court of the United States

OCTOBER TERM, 1975.

No. 74-1520

RICHARD J. ELROD, ET AL.,

Petitioners,

vs.

JOHN BURNS, ET AL.,

Respondents.

ON WRIT OF CERTIORARI TO THE UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE SEVENTH CIRCUIT.

PETITION FOR CERTIORARI FILED JUNE 2, 1975.
CERTIORARI GRANTED OCTOBER 6, 1975.

IN THE

Supreme Court of the United States

OCTOBER TERM, 1975.

No. 74-1520.

RICHARD J. ELROD, ET AL.,

Petitioners,

vs.

JOHN BURNS, ET AL.,

Respondents.

ON WRIT OF CERTIORARI TO THE UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE SEVENTH CIRCUIT.

INDEX TO APPENDIX.

	PAGE
Chronological List of Relevant Docket Entries	1
Complaint, Filed March 10, 1971	2-9
Motion for Preliminary Injunction Filed March 12, 1971	10
Affidavit of John Burns In Support of Plaintiffs Motion for Preliminary Injunction	11-17
Affidavit of Fred L. Buckley In Support of Plaintiffs Motion for Preliminary Injunction	18-20
Affidavit of Frank Vargas In Support of Plaintiffs Motion for Preliminary Injunction	21-22
Richard Elrod's Reply to Motion for Preliminary Injunction Filed March 12, 1971	23

The Democratic Organization of Cook County's et al. Reply to Motion for Preliminary Injunction 24-25

Finding of Fact, Conclusion of Law 26-29

Judgment Order Denying Motion for Preliminary Injunction—Filed March 29, 1971 30

Motion to Dismiss of Defendant Democratic Organization of Cook County, et al.—Filed March 31, 1971 31-32

Motion to Dismiss of Richard J. Elrod—Filed April 5, 1971 33-34

Memorandum Opinion and Order of District Court Granting Motion to Dismiss—Filed May 31, 1972 35-37

Opinion of the Court of Appeals, Filed January 30, 1975.*

* The opinion of the Court of Appeals is included as Exhibit A, of the Appendix to the Petition for a Writ of Certiorari filed in this Cause. The opinion is also reported in 509 F. 2d 1133 (7th Cir. 1975).

APPENDIX.

RELEVANT DOCKET ENTRIES.

3–10–71	Filed Complaint and 4 copies.
3–12–71	Filed motion for preliminary injunction, filed by the plaintiff.
3–12–71	Filed affidavit of Fred L. Buckley in support of plaintiff's motion for preliminary injunction.
3–12–71	Filed affidavit of John Burns in support of plaintiff's motion for preliminary injunction.
3–12–71	Filed defendant reply to motion for preliminary injunction.
3–15–71	Filed the affidavit of Frank Vargas in support of plaintiff's motion for preliminary injunction.
3–17–71	Defendants reply to plaintiffs motion for a preliminary injunction.
3–29–71	Enter Finding of Fact (Draft), Conclusion of Law (Draft), Judgment order. It is ordered that the plaintiff's motion for a preliminary injunction against the defendants, be and the same is hereby denied.—Hoffman, J. cb
3–31–71	Filed defendant motion to dismiss.
4– 5–71	Filed motion of defendant to dismiss complaint.
4– 5–71	Filed plaintiff's appellant notice of appeal.
5–31–72	Order defendants motion to dismiss granted. (Draft)—Bauer, J. Mailed notices 6-1-72.
6–28–72	Filed Plaintiff's Notice of Appeal.

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT,
For the Northern District of Illinois,
Eastern Division.

JOHN BURNS, FRANK VARGAS, JOSEPH DENNARD, and FRED BUCKLEY, on behalf of themselves and all other persons who were employees of the Office of the Sheriff of Cook County on December 7, 1970 and who were not protected by civil service or other laws against arbitrary discharge from their employment, Plaintiffs.

vs.

RICHARD J. ELROD, individually and as Sheriff of Cook County, Illinois, THE DEMOCRATIC ORGANIZATION OF COOK COUNTY, a corporation; DEMOCRATIC COUNTY CENTRAL COMMITTEE OF COOK COUNTY and RICHARD J. DALEY, individually and as President of the Democratic Organization of Cook County and as Chairman of the Democratic Central Committee of Cook County, Defendants.

Case No. 71C607

COMPLAINT.

Plaintiffs, by their attorneys, John C. Tucker and Robert Byman, complain against defendants as follows:

Count I.

1. Jurisdiction of this action lies in this Court under Sections 1331 and 1343 of Title 28 of the United States Code.

The matter in controversy in this action exceeds the sum or value of $10,000, exclusive of interest and costs.

2. Plaintiffs John Burns, Frank Vargas and Joseph Dennard were employees of the Office of the Sheriff of Cook County, Illinois, on and prior to December 7, 1970. They were not protected by civil service or similar laws against arbitrary discharge from their employment.

3. Defendant Richard J. Elrod, a Democrat, is the Sheriff of Cook County, having taken office from the prior Sheriff, Republican Joseph I. Woods, on December 7, 1970.

4. For many years past and continuing to this time it has been the practice of the elected Sheriff of Cook County, when he assumes office from a Sheriff of a different political party, to replace all or substantially all of the non-civil service employees of the Sheriff's office who did not (a) Pledge their political allegiance to the political party of the incoming Sheriff; and/or (b) Agree to work for the election of other candidates of the political party of the incoming Sheriff in future elections; and/or (c) Contribute a portion of their wages to the political party of the incoming Sheriff; and/or (d) Obtain sponsorship in his job from a ward or township committeeman or other official office holder or member of the political party of the incoming Sheriff. All or substantially all persons hired to replace said non-civil service employees were and are required to satisfy one or more or all of the conditions set forth in subparagraphs (a)-(d) of this paragraph.

5. Each of the above named plaintiffs has been fired from his or her said employment by or at the direction or with the approval of defendant Elrod since December 7, 1970 for the reason that he or she was a Republican rather than a Democrat or because he or she did not have the requisite political sponsorship for such employment by an official of the Democratic Party or for failure to comply with one or more of the conditions set forth in subparagraphs (a)-(d) of paragraph 4 above.

6. Plaintiff Fred Buckley is presently still employed by the Sheriff of Cook County. He is not protected by civil service or similar laws against arbitrary discharge. He has not met or agreed to meet any of the conditions set forth in subparagraphs (a)-(d) of paragraph 4 above. Plaintiff Fred Buckley is informed and believes, based upon the practices described in paragraph 4 and based upon plaintiff's knowledge of the adherence of defendant Elrod to those practices in the replacement of other employees of the Sheriff's office since December 7, 1970, that he is in imminent danger of being fired from his employment by reason of his failure to meet the aforementioned conditions.

7. Plaintiffs bring this action on behalf of themselves and on behalf of all other persons who were employed by the Office of the Sheriff of Cook County on December 7, 1970, and who are or were not protected by civil service or similar laws against arbitrary discharge from their employment. This class is so numerous that joinder of all members is impracticable. There are questions of law and fact common to the class. The claims of the plaintiffs are typical of the claims of the class. The plaintiffs will fairly and adequately protect the interests of the class. The prosecution of separate actions by or against individual members of the class would create a risk of inconsistent or varying adjudications with respect to individual members of the class which would establish incompatible standards of conduct for the party opposing the class. The defendant has acted on grounds generally applicable to the class, thereby making appropriate final injunctive relief and declaratory relief with respect to the class as a whole. The questions of law and fact common to the members of the class predominate over any questions affecting only individual members and a class action is superior to other available methods for a fair and efficient adjudication of the controversy.

8. Many members of the class represented herein in addition to plaintiffs Burns, Vargas and Dennard have recently been fired unlawfully by defendant for the reasons set forth in paragraph 5, and others have been forced to comply with some or all of the conditions set forth in paragraph 4 in order to avoid being fired for such reasons. Some or all members of the class who are still employed by the Sheriff's Office in addition to plaintiff Fred Buckley are in imminent danger of such unlawful firings. Unless enjoined by this Court, many members of the class will soon be unlawfully fired for their failure to comply with the conditions set forth in paragraph 4 or will be unlawfully coerced into complying with said conditions by the defendant.

9. Said firings and threatened firings have violated or will violate plaintiff's rights to equal protection of the law, freedom of association, freedom of speech and due process of law, in violation of the First, Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments to the Constitution of the United States, and of Sections 1983, 1985, 1986 and 1988 of Title 42 of the United States Code.

10. As a consequence of said firings or threatened firings plaintiffs have been or will be unlawfully deprived of their employment and the income and other benefits therefrom, and have been or will be otherwise injured. Said injury is irreparable. In addition irreparable injury has been and will be suffered by the public as a result of the inefficient operation of the Sheriff's office and the waste of public funds which results from the practices described above.

11. Plaintiffs have no adequate remedy at law.

Count II.

1-11. Plaintiffs reallege paragraphs 1 through 11 of Count I as paragraphs 1 through 11 of Count II.

12. Defendant The Democratic Organization of Cook County (hereinafter referred to as "DOCC") is an Illinois not-for-profit corporation. Defendant the Democratic County Central Committee of Cook County (hereinafter referred to as "Central Committee") is a statutory organization of the Democratic party. Defendant Richard J. Daley is President of the Democratic Organization of Cook County and Chairman of the Democratic County Central Committee of Cook County.

13. Defendant Richard J. Elrod was slated to run for the Office of Sheriff of Cook County on the Democratic ticket by the Central Committee and was supported in his campaign for office by Defendants DOCC, the Central Committee and Richard J. Daley.

14. The unlawful firing and replacement of members of plaintiffs class as set forth above was and is being carried out by Defendant Richard J. Elrod or his agents, servants or employees under the direction and control of and in conspiracy with Defendants DOCC and Central Committee and Richard J. Daley. Defendants DOCC and Central Committee and Richard J. Daley have actively aided and abetted Defendant Richard J. Elrod in the unlawful conduct described above in one or more of the following ways:

(a) By screening the political party affiliation of members of plaintiff class.

(b) By soliciting members of plaintiff class to meet the conditions set forth in subparagraphs (a) through (d) of paragraph 4.

(c) By supplying letters of recommendation or approval, commonly known as patronage letters, to certain members of plaintiffs class who have been coerced into meeting the conditions set forth in paragraph 4.

(d) By screening and/or supplying patronage letters to replacements or potential replacements of the employees who are members of plaintiffs class who have been or are about to be unlawfully fired.

(e) By actively encouraging and soliciting Defendant Richard J. Elroy to pursue the unlawful practices described in paragraph 4, 5, 6 and 8 above.

(f) By other conduct and activities the exact nature of which is unknown to plaintiffs at the present time.

15. As a result of the aforementioned conspiracy between the defendants many members of plaintiffs class have been unlawfully deprived of their employment and the income and other benefits therefrom and have been otherwise injured and many other members of plaintiffs class are in imminent danger of being unlawfully fired for their failure to comply with the conditions set forth in paragraph 4 above and will thereby suffer irreparable injury unless the injunctive relief they seek is promptly granted.

16. Plaintiffs have no adequate remedy at law.

Count III.

1-5. Plaintiffs Burns, Vargas and Dennard reallege paragraphs 1 through 5 of Count I as paragraphs 1 through 5 of Count III.

6. Said firings violated plaintiffs' rights to equal protection of the law, freedom of association, freedom of speech and due process, in violation of the First, Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments to the Constitution of the United States, and of Sections 1983, 1985, 1986 and 1988 of Title 42 of the United States Code.

7. As a consequence of said firings, plaintiffs have been unlawfully deprived of their employment and the income and other benefits therefrom, and have been otherwise injured.

WHEREFORE, plaintiffs pray that this Court:

A. Enter a judgment declaring that the rights of the plaintiffs and the class they represent under the United States Constitution and Code have been and, unless enjoined by this Court, will be violated by the acts and practices of defendants as alleged in this complaint, including specifically the conditioning of employment or any term or aspect of employment by the Office of the Sheriff of Cook County, Illinois, upon an employee's or prospective employee's present or future political support of (including financial contributions to, political work for, or loyalty or allegiance to) the Democratic Party or any other political party or any official, unit or affiliate of the Democratic Party, or any other political party, or any candidate for public office endorsed or supported by the Democratic Party or any other political party or by any official, unit or affiliate of any such political party.

B. Grant a preliminary injunction against the defendants and their officers, agents, servants, employees and attorneys, and all persons in active concert or participation with them, pending final determination of this cause on its merits:

(1) Enjoining each of them from directly or indirectly (a) conditioning any employment covered by the Office of the Sheriff of Cook County, or any term or aspect of such employment, upon an employee's or prospective employee's present or future membership in or political support of the Democratic Party, or any official, unit or affiliate of the Democratic Party, or any candidate for public office endorsed or supported by the Democratic Party or by any such official, unit or affiliate thereof; (b) taking or threatening to take any action of a punitive nature or effect against any such employee or prospective employee, relating to his or her said employment or prospective employment, based upon such employee's or prospective employee's political beliefs or lawful political conduct; and (c) performing, inducing, aiding, abetting, participating in, cooperating with or encouraging any act which is proscribed by this paragraph B.(1).

(2) Ordering defendant Richard Elrod to prepare and promptly post or cause to be posted court-approved notices in each office and facility under his control as Sheriff of Cook County, informing all employees and other persons therein of the provisions of this order and to take such other court-approved acts as are necessary to insure that all persons covered by this order are promptly and adequately informed of its provisions.

(3) Ordering defendant Richard Elrod to reinstate those plaintiffs, and all other members of plaintiffs' class who have been unlawfully fired from their employment with the Sheriff's Office since December 7, 1970, in the jobs they held with the Sheriff's Office at the time thereof without employment prejudice of any kind, or, in the alternative, ordering said Richard Elrod to establish a separate and segregated fund subject to the control of this Court into which defendant shall deposit, within a time set by the Court, sufficient funds to provide back pay for all members of plaintiffs' class who have already been discharged from their employment from the date of their discharge to the present and into which fund defendant shall continue to make deposits for back pay accrued during the pendency of this action until further order of the Court.

C. Enter an order making the aforementioned preliminary injunction permanent upon final determination of this cause.

D. Enter judgment in favor of plaintiffs and against defendants awarding each of the plaintiffs and each member of plaintiffs' class who has been unlawfully discharged compensatory damages in the amount of all wages and other moneys lost as a result of their unlawful firing, plus exemplary damages in the amount of $15,000 each, and awarding said plaintiffs their reasonable costs and expenses in this cause.

E. Grant plaintiffs such additional relief as may be necessary or proper, including the payment by defendant of such attorneys' fees to counsel for plaintiffs as the Court may deem just.

* * * * *

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT,
For the Northern District of Illinois,
Eastern Division.

[Title omitted in printing.]

MOTION FOR PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION.

Plaintiffs John Burns, Frank Vargas, Joseph Dennard and Fred Buckley on behalf of themselves and all others similarly situated by their attorneys, John C. Tucker and Robert L. Byman, respectfully move this Court for the entry of an order granting plaintiffs a preliminary injunction against defendants pending a final determination of this cause in accordance with the prayer for relief in the verified complaint herein.

In support of this motion there are attached hereto:

1. Plaintiffs' verified complaint.
2. The affidavit of John F. Burns.
3. The affidavit of Fred L. Buckley.

* * * * *

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT,
For the Northern District of Illinois,
Eastern Division.

[Title omitted in printing.]

AFFIDAVIT OF JOHN BURNS IN SUPPORT OF PLAINTIFFS' MOTION FOR PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION.

STATE OF ILLINOIS }
COUNTY OF COOK } ss.

JOHN BURNS, being duly sworn, on oath states:

1. I am one of the plaintiffs in this cause. I reside at 3612 West 111th Street, Chicago, Illinois.

2. Commencing in approximately October, 1963, and continuously thereafter until on or about February 15, 1971, with the exception of a two-year period spent in the military service, I was an employee of the office of the Sheriff of Cook County. From approximately October of 1963 until November of 1964, I was a Sheriff's Officer or guard at the Cook County jail. After two years in the armed services, commencing approximately December, 1966, I rejoined the Sheriff's office as a Process Server in the Civil Division. Within a few months I was promoted to Supervisor in the Return Department. Within a few months thereafter, I took on an additional supervisory assignment in the Assignment Department. Within a few months after that, I was promoted to Deputy Supervisor of the Process Division. Thereafter, I was made Assistant Chief Deputy of the Process Division, and in approximately January, 1968, I became Chief Deputy of the Process Division, and thereafter also took on over-all supervision of all departments working on the Seventh Floor of the Civic Center for the Sheriff's office.

3. I am a Republican and was originally sponsored for my job with the Cook County Sheriff's office in 1963 by Republican State Senator Robert Hatch.

4. On or about December 7, 1970, following the November elections, Richard Elrod, a Democrat, replaced Joseph Woods, a Republican, as Sheriff of Cook County. In the period immediately before and after Mr. Elrod's taking office, I conferred with him on several occasions with respect to the organization and operations of the Sheriff's office.

5. Within a week or two of Mr. Elrod's taking office, I was informed by Robert Gore, who had been Chief Deputy Sheriff under Joseph Woods, that Mr. Elrod had told him that it would be necessary to fire fifty Sheriff's employees from the Civil Division immediately, in order to make room for Elrod's men. Mr. Gore and I then went to Mr. Elrod to confer with him and requested that he permit us to prepare the list of fifty Sheriff's employees to be fired so that we could eliminate those persons who had been least efficient in their jobs or who could be best spared pending training of their replacements. Mr. Elrod agreed to that procedure and we prepared such a list and delivered it to him, and the Sheriff's employees on that list were immediately fired with the possible exception of a few who were able to obtain Democratic sponsorship, pursuant to the procedures explained below.

6. Within a few weeks after Mr. Elrod took office, Mr. Ray Carvis was hired by Mr. Elrod as an employee of the Sheriff's office. During the time between Mr. Carvis' hiring and the time I left the Sheriff's office, Mr. Carvis devoted the majority of his time to acting as Personnel or Patronage Supervisor for the Sheriff's office in the replacement of existing employees of the Sheriff's office with Democratic patronage employees.

7. Shortly after Mr. Carvis came into the Sheriff's office. he and I had a conversation. Mr. Carvis told me that he would be in charge of the replacement of Sheriff's employees from the Joseph Woods administration with "our people." He told me that he needed a certain number of jobs from the Process Department immediately. I do not recall the precise number of jobs which he said he needed immediately on this first occasion. He told me to prepare a list of persons to be fired and to bring it to him so that he could check and eliminate from the list those who had been able to obtain Democratic sponsorship. I prepared such a list and took it to Mr. Carvis. Mr. Carvis examined the list and compared it with a file of letters which he maintained. Mr. Carvis crossed several names off of the list, stating that those persons whose names he had crossed off had been responsored. He then directed me to fire the remaining persons on the list as quickly as possible, which I did.

8. Over the course of the next two or three weeks, the procedure described in paragraph 7 above was repeated on numerous occasions. Mr. Carvis would call me several times every day asking me to prepare a list of a certain number of persons to be fired in a certain department. I would prepare such lists and deliver them to Mr. Carvis who would then cross off certain names, stating that those persons had "gotten Democratic sponsorship" or "been responsored." In the context of our conversation, the term "responsored," when applied to an employee who had worked in the Sheriff's office under Sheriff Woods, means the same as the term "getting Democratic sponsorship."

9. During the period after Mr. Carvis first joined the Sheriff office, it was very difficult to get together with Mr. Carvis to deliver to him the lists which he would telephone me to prepare. Mr. Carvis would be in and out of the Sheriff's office frequently, and spent most of his time at City Hall or Democratic Headquarters or with Sheriff Elrod. After going through the procedure of preparing lists and delivering them to Mr. Carvis as described above for a week or two, I had a conversation with Mr. Carvis. I told Mr. Carvis that in light of the fact that it was very difficult for me to reach him to deliver the lists to him so that he could eliminate from the lists those persons who had obtained responsorship from the Democratic organization, and in light of the fact that he was pushing me to get people fired as quickly as possible after he requested a certain number of jobs, it would be more efficient if he could permit me to have access to his file of sponsorship letters so that I could check off the names of persons who had been responsored myself, rather than having to wait for several days to catch him in his office. Mr. Carvis agreed to this procedure and thereafter on several occasions I prepared lists at his request and then checked the lists against his file of Democratic patronage letters, eliminating from the lists of employees to be fired those who had obtained Democratic sponsorship letters. These letters, which I reviewed on several occasions, came from Democratic Ward Committeemen and various Democratic party officeholders in the City of Chicago and Cook County, as well as State and National officeholders. For the most part these letters were addressed to Sheriff Elrod and stated in substance that the author of the letter was sponsoring a named person for a job with the Sheriff's office, naming the job (process server, clerk, secretary, etc.).

10. On several occasions, employees who were dismissed under the above procedures were able to obtain Democratic sponsorship letters after they had been informed that they were being dismissed. Those persons were immediately reinstated. On at least one occasion that I can recall, I received a telephone call from Mr. Carvis with respect to an employee whom I had dismissed at Mr. Carvis's request. Mr. Carvis informed me that the employee had just been responsored and that I should return his credentials to him and reinstate him, which I did. On another occasion, when I informed an employee that he would be discharged as of the end of the following day, the employee asked me if I couldn't hold off because he was expecting to get a Democratic sponsorship. I told him that my instructions from Mr. Carvis were to dismiss him and that he would have to straighten the matter out with Mr. Carvis the following day. The next day the employee came in with a letter and told me that it was his Democratic sponsorship letter. I told him to take it to Mr. Carvis and later I received word from Mr. Carvis not to discharge that employee.

11. With the exception of some of the persons who were fired in the first group of fifty employees described in paragraph 5 above, all of the persons whom I was ordered to discharge pursuant to the procedures described above were performing their duties as employees of the Sheriff's office in an entirely efficient and satisfactory way. Many of them were among the most experienced and efficient employees of the office. In each case they were discharged solely because of the fact that they did not have Democratic sponsorship and in order to open a "slot" to be filled by someone who had Democratic sponsorship.

12. On several occasions between December 7, 1970, and January 15, 1971, I had conversations with Mr. Carvis and with Mr. Elrod, in which I urged them to hold off on some of their discharges because of the fact that the efficiency of the Sheriff's office was being injured by discharging too many key employees too rapidly before replacement employees with Democratic sponsorship could be trained to fill their jobs. Mr. Carvis and Mr. Elrod both stated that they understood this problem and they permitted me to select the employees to be fired (provided they did not have Democratic responsorship) in order to minimize the disruption as much as possible. However, on most occasions when I complained that they were firing too many people too fast, without adequate trained replacements, they insisted on maintaining the number of firings requested, stating that "we have to have the jobs."

13. On one occasion after I had received a request to prepare a list of persons to be fired in a particular department, which I felt would cause severe disruption in the operations of that department, I conferred on the subject with Mr. Elrod. Mr. Elrod stated that he understood the problem but that he had to have those jobs immediately because "the fifth floor is pressuring me to put our people to work." On at least one other occasion, during a similar conversation, Mr. Elrod stated in substance, "Look, I need this done—I'm getting too much pressure from the man on the fifth floor." In Chicago political parlance, reference to "the fifth floor" or "the man on the fifth floor" is synonymous with, and commonly known to mean, the office of Mayor Richard J. Daley which occupies the fifth floor of the City Hall.

14. In about the last week of December, 1970, while I was conferring with Mr. Elrod, Mr. Elrod introduced me to Mr. Ronald Wronsky (I am not certain of the spelling) and told me that Mr. Wronsky would be my replacement but that he wanted me to stay on for several weeks to help train Mr. Wronsky. On or about January 13, 1971, Mr. Carvis informed me that Friday, January 15, would be my last day of employment. Because of my long service with the Sheriff's office, during which I had taken less vacation than I was entitled to, I was given four weeks' vacation starting January 15, 1971, and my employment officially terminated on or about February 15, 1971. It was understood that the termination of my employment was purely in order that my job might be made available to a person sponsored by the Democratic party. My replacement, Mr. Wronsky, is known to me to be the Secretary of the 45th Ward Democratic Organization.

15. Prior to my leaving the Sheriff's office, I prepared and gave to Mr. Carvis and Mr. Elrod a list of employees in key positions. I informed them that in my opinion it was essential that these persons be retained in their jobs as long as possible, and that they should begin training their replacements immediately in order to avoid disruption of the services of the Sheriff's office. I informed them that in my opinion it would take a minimum of six months to train adequate replacements for these key employees. Since I left the Sheriff's office, I have been informed that patronage replacement of Sheriff's employees is continuing and that several of the key employees referred to above have been replaced.

16. Prior to the time when Mr. Elrod became Sheriff, Mr. Joseph Woods brought me a copy of a letter which he had received relating to the decision of the United States Court of Appeals in Shakman, et al. v. The Democratic Organization of Cook County, et al. In substance, the letter stated that under the Shakman decision it would be improper and illegal for the incoming Sheriff to fire employees of the Sheriff's office for purely political or patronage reasons. Mr. Woods instructed me to distribute copies of the letter and post it on bulletin boards in the area of the Sheriff's office on the seventh floor of the Civic Center, which I did. Thereafter, after Mr. Elrod had taken office, I had a conversation with Mr. Elrod in which I referred to the above-mentioned letter. I asked Mr. Elrod if it really meant anything and what he intended to do about it. Mr. Elrod stated, in substance, "As far as I'm concerned, it means absolutely nothing. This is the way the system has run since it started and I'm not going to change it."

Further affiant saith not.

* * * * *

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT,
For the Northern District of Illinois,
Eastern Division.

[Title Omitted in Printing.]

AFFIDAVIT OF FRED L. BUCKLEY IN SUPPORT OF PLAINTIFFS' MOTION FOR PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION.

STATE OF ILLINOIS } ss.
COUNTY OF COOK }

FRED L. BUCKLEY, being duly sworn, on oath states:

1. I am one of the plaintiffs in the above cause. I reside at 3900 South Calumet Avenue, Chicago, Illinois.

2. In 1967 I became employed in the Office of the Sheriff of Cook County as a process server in the Process Department. The Sheriff of Cook County at that time was Joseph Woods. I was sponsored for my employment by Hamilton B. Talbert who was the Fourth Ward Republican Committeeman. I have remained an employee of the Sheriff's office as a process server from the time of my employment in 1967 until the present. I am presently responsible for services of process in the area bordered by 14th Street on the north, 26th Street on the south, Canal Street on the east and Western Avenue on the west.

3. Prior to the time that Richard Elrod became Sheriff of Cook County my supervisor in the Process Department was Mr. Maiorello (I am not certain of the spelling). Mr. Maiorello was fired from his position approximately a month after Mr. Elrod became Sheriff of Cook County. He was replaced by Mr. Sland (I am not certain of the spelling) who is presently my supervisor. It is my understanding that Mr. Sland is a Democrat.

4. Some time within a few days after Mr. Sland became employed by the Sheriff's office and became my supervisor I had a conversation with Mr. Sland in the presence of several other persons who were employees of the Sheriff's office and who had obtained their employment prior to Mr. Elrod becoming Sheriff. Mr. Sland said to us, in substance, "The only sure way for you to keep your jobs is for you to get a Democratic sponsorship letter."

5. Since December 7, 1970 when Mr. Elrod became Sheriff of Cook County a large number of the employees of the Sheriff's office in the Process Department who were employees of the Department on and before December 7, 1970 have been fired. I do not know the exact number of employees who have been fired but I believe that it is well over one-half of those persons who were employees of the Process Department on December 7, 1970. To my knowledge, several persons who were employees of the Sheriff's office as of December 7, 1970 have switched from the Republic to the Democratic party and have obtained Democratic sponsorship letters. Those persons have not been fired from their employment.

6. Some time around the middle of February I had a conversation with an employee of the Sheriff's office known to me as Lieutenant Smitty. Smitty had been an employee of the Sheriff's office under Sheriff Woods and at that time was a Republican. Some time after Mr. Elrod became Sheriff Smitty switched from being a Republican to being a Democrat and, I believe, obtained Democratic sponsorship. At the time of the conversation referred to above Smitty was wearing a "Daley" button. Smitty asked me whether I had made contact with a Democratic sponsor. I told him that I had not. Smitty then said, in substance, "Why don't you go out and get one? You want to keep your job don't you?" I responded that I did not want to change parties. Smith asked me what the Republican party was going to do for me and I said as far as I knew, nothing. Smitty then said, in substance, "Well then you better get a Democratic sponsor, it's the only way to keep your job. You don't have anything to lose."

7. On March 9, 1971 I had a conversation with a woman known to me as Pauline who is a Clerk in the Process Department of the Sheriff's office and who was an employee of the Sheriff's office under Sheriff Woods. Pauline has also switched from the Republican party to the Democratic party since Mr. Elrod became Sheriff and at the time of our conversation was wearing a "Daley" button. Pauline also asked me, in substance, "Why I didn't try to get Democratic sponsorship so that I can keep my job."

8. Some time around the first week in January I had a conversation with a man known to me as Mack who is an Assistant Democratic Precinct Captain in the area around 14th Street and Newberry. Mack asked me whether I would like to obtain Democratic sponsorship so that I could keep my job. He stated, in substance, that if I would switch from the Republicans to the Democrats he thought I could get sponsorship from a man known as "Susie" who is the Democratic Precinct Captain in that area and that I could then work with Mack in his precinct. I told Mack that I would think about it and Mack set up an appointment for me with "Susie". I told Mack that I would think about it and had him set up the appointment because I thought that by doing so I might be able to keep my job a little longer. However, I did not keep the appointment with "Susie" because I do not wish to switch from the Republican to the Democratic party.

9. I do not have and do not intend to seek Democratic sponsorship and I believe that, as a result, I will be fired from my job in the Sheriff's office sometime in the near future unless an injunction is granted prohibiting the firing of Sheriff's employees for political reasons.

* * * * *

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT,
For the Northern District of Illinois,
Eastern Division.

[Title Omitted in Printing.]

AFFIDAVIT OF FRANK VARGAS IN SUPPORT OF PLAINTIFFS' MOTION FOR PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION.

STATE OF ILLINOIS }
COUNTY OF COOK } ss.

FRANK VARGAS, being duly sworn, on oath states:

1. I reside at 427 North Lawler, Chicago, Illinois.

2. Commencing approximately October 22, 1969, and continuously thereafter until approximately February 19, 1971, I was employed by the Office of the Sheriff of Cook County as a bailiff and security guard for the Juvenile Court of Cook County.

3. I am a Republican and was sponsored for my job with the Office of the Sheriff of Cook County by Ed Moore, 30th Ward Republican Committeeman.

4. My supervisor, under Sheriff Woods, was Russell Gardner, and he had an assistant named Marge (whose last name I do not know). Approximately two weeks after Sheriff Elrod took office from Sheriff Woods, Gardner was replaced by Charles Meyers, a Democrat. Shortly thereafter, Marge was also replaced by a Democrat.

5. During the period following the election of Richard J. Elrod as Sheriff and his replacement, Gardner told me on several occasions that if I did not get Democratic responsorship I would be "viced" ("viced" is a word which means fired). After Gardner was replaced by Meyers, Meyers also told me on several occasions that I would be fired unless I got Democratic responsorship.

6. On or about February 18, 1971, I had some personal trouble and called Meyers to tell him that I could not come to work that day. He told me that the next day, February 19, 1971, would be my last day on the job. I asked if I had done anything wrong in the performance of my duties. Throughout the course of my employment, I took less sick leave and personal leave than I was entitled to; I thought that I had been an efficient and faithful employee. Meyers told me that my being viced had nothing to do with my work, but that he had a Democratic replacement for me. He said something to the effect that "I have orders to let people go. I have to let 22 more people go after you."

7. After being fired, I received two weeks' vacation pay to which I was entitled since I had never taken a vacation. However, I have still not received any pay for the four days between February 15 and February 19, 1971.

Further affiant saith not.

* * * * *

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT,
For the Northern District of Illinois,
Eastern Division.

[Title omitted in printing.]

REPLY TO PLAINTIFFS' MOTION FOR A PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION.

Defendant, Richard J. Elrod, individually and as Sheriff of Cook County, Illinois, by his attorney, Edward V. Hanrahan, State's Attorney of Cook County, Illinois, objects to plaintiffs' motion for a preliminary injunction for the following reasons:

1. In the case at bar, plaintiffs have failed to demonstrate that irreparable injury may result if the preliminary injunction is not entered. Moreover, there has been no showing, in the affidavit attached to plaintiffs' motion, of an immediate danger or threat to plaintiffs' status.

2. There is no showing by the plaintiffs in this case of reasonable probability of succeeding on the merits of their claims.

3. If a preliminary injunction is issued in the case at bar, any possibility of damage to the plaintiffs which might be prevented is clearly outweighed by the possibility of impairment in the functioning of an important governmental office.

4. In the case at bar, the entry of a preliminary injunction before the Court determines whether it has jurisdiction of the cause would be improper.

5. Insofar as the preliminary injunction requests affirmative relief, there is no sufficient showing that such relief should be granted.

WHEREFORE, for the foregoing reasons, defendant, Richard J. Elrod, respectfully prays that plaintiffs' motion for a preliminary injunction be denied.

* * * * *

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT,
For the Northern District of Illinois,
Eastern Division.

[Title omitted in printing.]

REPLY TO MOTION FOR PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION.

Now come the defendants, The Democratic Organization of Cook County, a corporation; Democratic County Central Committee of Cook County and Richard J. Daley, individually and as President of the Democratic Organization of Cook County and as Chairman of the Democratic County Central Committee of Cook County, by Thomas A. Foran and Raymond F. Simon, their attorneys, and in reply for preliminary injunction here states as follows:

1. That a preliminary injunction herein does not lie in that such injunctions can only be granted in the discretion of the Court where there is a showing of "reasonable certainty" of ultimately prevailing in the proceedings.

2. That in the case at bar, defendants submit that there is no "reasonable certainty" of prevailing in the proceedings herein, in that:

a. The Court is without jurisdiction for want of a substantial federal question, and the requisite jurisdictional amount.

b. That the plaintiffs are without standing.

c. That the complaint fails to state a claim upon which relief can be granted.

d. That the issue involved herein is not a justiciable issue being in nature and substance a political question.

3. That a preliminary injunction can only be granted where there is no adequate remedy at law and where irreparable injury would otherwise result.

4. That in the case at bar, there is an adequate remedy at law and no irreparable injury can result since the suit herein relates to employment of the plaintiffs and in the event of their prevailing in the proceedings they can be reinstated with back pay and/or can be awarded damages.

5. That a preliminary injunction is improper and improvident if it does not safeguard the interest of all the parties to the proceedings.

6. That in the case at bar the proposed injunction would seriously and adversely affect the operation and administration of a public office of State government, to wit; the Sheriff's Office of Cook County, Illinois, an office charged with the exercise of police power in the interest of the citizens of Cook County who number in excess of 5,000,000 in that such injunction would affect without any hearing or determination of the merits herein:

a. The necessity of court hearings and/or review of each and every instance of hiring, firing, promotion or demotion of personnel of the said office during the pendency of the injunction.

b. The actual or probable disclosure of confidential and privilege law enforcement information relative to employment status where such factors were, are or may be the basis for hiring or discharge.

c. The establishment of a fund as to which no authority or appropriations exist, which would divert tax payers money from other essential governmental functions and/or the lawful purpose for which such funds were appropriated, or would require the termination or curtailment of other essential public services all to the damage and injury to the public interest and the proper administration of said office.

WHEREFORE, based on the above and foregoing reason the defendants respectfully pray that the Motion for Preliminary Injunction herein be denied.

• • • • • •

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT,
For the Northern District of Illinois,
Eastern Division.

JOHN BURNS, FRANK VARGAS, JOSEPH DENNARD, and FRED BUCKLEY on behalf of themselves and all other persons who were employees of the Office of the Sheriff of Cook County on December 7, 1970 and who were not protected by civil service or other laws against arbitrary discharge from their employment,
Plaintiffs,

vs.

RICHARD J. ELROD, individually and as Sheriff of Cook County, Illinois, THE DEMOCRATIC ORGANIZATION OF COOK COUNTY, a corporation; DEMOCRATIC COUNTY CENTRAL COMMITTEE OF COOK COUNTY and RICHARD J. DALEY, individually and as President of the Democratic Organization of Cook County and as Chairman of the Democratic County Central Committee of Cook County, Defendants.

No. 71 C 607

FINDINGS OF FACT, CONCLUSIONS OF LAW AND JUDGMENT ORDER IN CONNECTION WITH THE PLAINTIFFS' MOTION FOR A PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION.

Findings of Fact.

1. The Court finds that the sufficiency or adequacy of the complaint has not been placed in issue and that no determination of the sufficiency or adequacy of the complaint has been made.

2. That no determination has been made relative to the propriety of a class action under Rule 23(c) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure and Rule 22 of the Civil Rules of the United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois.

3. That the plaintiffs, John Burns, Frank Vargas, and Joseph Dennard are former employees of the Sheriff of Cook County, whose positions were not subject to civil service regulations and that plaintiff, Fred Buckley, is presently an employee of the Sheriff of Cook County, whose position is not covered by civil service regulations.

4. That the action purports to be filed on behalf of the four (4) named individuals and on behalf of the class of all persons who were employed by the Sheriff of Cook County on December 7, 1970, and whose positions are or were not covered by regulations under civil service or other laws against arbitrary discharge.

5. That the defendants are Richard J. Elrod, the Sheriff of Cook County; The Democratic Organization of Cook County, a corporation; the Democratic County Central Committee of Cook County; and Richard J. Daley, individually and as President of the Democratic Organization of Cook County and as Chairman of the Democratic County Central Committee of Cook County.

6. That the complaint alleges that the defendant, Richard J. Elrod, individually and in conspiracy with the other defendants, has been discharging employees of the Cook County Sheriff's office solely because they are Republicans; that only Sheriff's employees who switched parties and are able to obtain Democratic sponsorship, are being permitted to retain their positions; that the plaintiffs, John Burns, Frank Vargas, and Joseph Dennard, have already been discharged solely because of their political party affiliations; that the plaintiff, Fred Buckley, has not yet been discharged but has been threatened with discharge if he is unable to obtain sponsorship by the Democratic Party; and that such acts or threats of discharge violate the plaintiff's rights under the First, Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments of the United States Constitution, in violation of 42 U. S. C. §§ 1983 1985, 1986, and 1988.

7. That the only showing of injury made by the plaintiffs is the loss of employment in the office of the Sheriff of Cook County.

JULIUS J. HOFFMAN,
United States District Judge.

Dated: March 29, 1971

Conclusions of Law.

1. The Court concludes that for the purpose of this motion for a preliminary injunction, the well-pleaded facts in the complaint has been conceded by the defendants, in open court, and are therefore assumed to be true.

2. That in order to prevail in a motion for a preliminary injunction, the plaintiffs must maintain the burden of showing that there is a substantial risk of irreparable injury to the plaintiffs' rights if immediate relief is not granted and that there is a likelihood that the plaintiffs will ultimately prevail in their action on the merits.

3. That the plaintiffs' allegations concerning injuries resulting from loss of employment as have been set forth in the complaint and affidavits in support of the motion, do not constitute a sufficient showing of irreparable injury to warrant a preliminary injunction.

4. That the plaintiffs have an adequate remedy at law.

5. That having determined that the plaintiffs have failed to make an adequate showing of irreparable injury, it is not necessary to rule and the Court therefore, does not rule on the question of whether or not the plaintiffs have made an adequate showing of a likelihood that they would ultimately prevail in their suit on the merits.

JULIUS J. HOFFMAN,
United States District Judge.

Dated: March 29, 1971

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT,
For the Northern District of Illinois,
Eastern Division.

JOHN BURNS, FRANK VARGAS, JOSEPH DENNARD, and FRED BUCKLEY on behalf of themselves and all other persons who were employees of the Office of the Sheriff of Cook County on December 7, 1970 and who were not protected by civil service or other laws against arbitrary discharge from their employment,

Plaintiffs,

vs.

RICHARD J. ELROD, individually and as Sheriff of Cook County, Illinois, THE DEMOCRATIC ORGANIZATION OF COOK COUNTY, a corporation; DEMOCRATIC COUNTY CENTRAL COMMITTEE OF COOK COUNTY and RICHARD J. DALEY, individually and as President of the Democratic Organization of Cook County and as Chairman of the Democratic County Central Committee of Cook County, Defendants.

No. 71 C 607

JUDGMENT ORDER.

IT IS ORDERED that the plaintiffs' motion for a preliminary injunction against the defendants, be and the same is hereby denied.

ENTER:

JULIUS J. HOFFMAN,
United States District Judge.

Dated: March 29, 1971

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT,
For the Northern District of Illinois,
Eastern Division.

[Title omitted in printing.]

MOTION TO DISMISS.

Now come the defendants, The Democratic Organization of Cook County, a corporation; Democratic County Central Committee of Cook County and Richard J. Daley, individually and as President of the Democratic Organization of Cook County and as Chairman of the Democratic County Central Committee of Cook County, by Thomas A. Foran and Raymond F. Simon their attorneys, and move to dismiss the complaint herein and in support state as follows:

1. That the Court lacks jurisdiction, in that:
   (a) The actual amount in controversy is less than ten thousand dollars, exclusive of interest and costs;
   (b) The purported claim herein does not involve a substantial federal question.

2. That the complaint herein does not involve a proper class action under Rule 23 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.

3. That the plaintiffs herein lack standing as to all or part of the claim or claims sought to be alleged herein.

4. That the complaint fails to state a claim upon which relief can be granted in that:
   (a) No legal right of the plaintiffs have been violated;
   (b) No violation of plaintiffs' legal rights have occurred under color of state law;
   (c) The constitutional rights which plaintiffs assert are not absolute rights and no legally cognizable infringement of such rights have occurred under the circumstances set forth in the complaint;

(d) That all or part of the claim or claims asserted herein do not involve a justiciable case or controversy;

(e) That all or part of the claim or claims asserted herein are not justiciable as constituting political question or questions;

(f) That all or part of the claim or claims asserted and relief sought is barred by equitable principles and doctrines.

WHEREFORE, defendants pray that the motion to dismiss be granted and the complaint herein be dismissed.

* * * * *

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT,
For the Northern District of Illinois,
Eastern Division.

[Title omitted in printing.]

MOTION TO DISMISS.

Defendant, Richard J. Elrod, individually and as Sheriff of Cook County, Illinois, by his attorney, Edward V. Hanrahan, State's Attorney of Cook County, Illinois, moves this Court to dismiss plaintiffs' action for the following reasons:

1. The complaint fails to state a claim against this defendant upon which relief can be granted;

2. The complaint fails to raise a substantial Federal question;

3. Plaintiffs have no standing to bring this action since there is no right to government employment;

4. The political rights which plaintiffs claim are being violated or threatened with violation are not protected by the First Amendment;

5. The plaintiffs have no absolute right to engage in political activity while holding political employment;

6. The complaint raises a political question. Plaintiffs' claims are nonjusticiable;

7. The First Amendment as applied through the Fourteenth Amendment only protects a potential plaintiff against State action. No State action is involved in plaintiffs' claims;

8. Inasmuch as plaintiffs' claims are based upon violations of the Civil Rights Act (42 USC 1981, et seq.) this Court has no jurisdiction since none of the alleged violations or threatened violations of plaintiffs' civil rights have occurred under color of State law;

9. Plaintiffs bring this action in bad faith and with unclean hands in that their complaint reveals they were beneficiaries of the practices of which they are complaining;

10. The complaint discloses that this action is not properly brought as a class action;

11. The court lacks jurisdiction on the ground that the amount actually in controversy is less than ten thousand dollars exclusive of interest and costs.

* * * * *

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT,
For the Northern District of Illinois,
Eastern Division.

JOHN BURNS, FRANK VARGAS, JOSEPH DENNARD, and FRED BUCKLEY on behalf of themselves and all other persons who were employees of the Office of the Sheriff of Cook County on December 7, 1970 and who were not protected by civil service or other laws against arbitrary discharge from their employment,
Plaintiffs,

vs.

RICHARD J. ELROD, individually and as Sheriff of Cook County, Illinois, THE DEMOCRATIC ORGANIZATION OF COOK COUNTY, a corporation; DEMOCRATIC COUNTY CENTRAL COMMITTEE OF COOK COUNTY and RICHARD J. DALEY, individually and as President of the Democratic Organization of Cook County and as Chairman of the Democratic County Central Committee of Cook County,
Defendants.

No. 71 C 607

MEMORANDUM OPINION AND ORDER.

This cause comes on defendants' motion to dismiss pursuant to Rule 12(b)(6) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.

Plaintiffs John Burns, Frank Vargas and Joseph Dennard were employees in the office of the Sheriff of Cook County, Illinois on and before December 7, 1970 when Richard Elrod, a Democrat replaced Joseph Woods a Republican as Sheriff, it must be taken as true, for the purposes of this motion, that each of these named plaintiffs was discharged from the Sheriff's Office either because of his affiliation with the Republican Party or because of his failure to switch political parties or to obtain Democratic political sponsorship. Plaintiff Fred Buckley, according to the complaint, is presently an employee of the Sheriff's Office imminently threatened with discharge unless he agrees to obtain Democratic sponsorship by agreeing to work for the Democratic Party. None of the plaintiffs' positions with the Sheriff's Office are or were protected by laws prohibiting arbitrary discharge.

This action, purportedly brought by the named plaintiffs on behalf of themselves and all others similarly situated, seeks to enjoin defendants Richard J. Elrod, Sheriff of Cook County, Illinois; the Democratic Organization of Cook County; the Democratic County Central Committee of Cook County; and Richard J. Daley, individually and as President of the Democratic Organization and Chairman of the Democratic County Central Committee from continuing to condition employment with the Sheriff's Office upon membership in, sponsorship by and active support of any political party.

Plaintiffs also seek to enjoin defendants from coercing or attempting to coerce employees of the Sheriff's Office into abandoning their political affiliation with or support of any political party and from coercing or attempting to coerce said employees into agreeing to join and support any political party by terminating or threatening to terminate their employment with the Sheriff's Office and/or by discriminating against them in the conditions of they employment. In addition, plaintiffs seek reinstatement, back wages and damages on behalf of employees who have already been terminated by defendant Elrod because of their inability or unwillingness to abandon their prior political affiliation and obtain political sponsorship from the Democratic Party.

Plaintiffs claim that defendants' actions have violated, inter alia, their First Amendment right to free political association. The instant motion raises the issue of whether the complaint states a claim upon which relief can be granted.

The excellent briefs filed by the parties have referred this Court to many authorities whose teachings have relevance to the instant case; however, only one authority has been cited which is directly on point and this Court believes it should be controlling.

In Alomar v. Dwyer, 447 F. 2d 482 (2nd Cir. 1971), cert. denied, ... U. S. ..... (Jan. 10, 1972), a municipal employee alleged she had been discharged from non-tenured employment because of her failure to switch political parties. In upholding a lower court's dismissal of the complaint, the Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit stated:

> The response to appellant's claim is found in Bailey v. Richardson, 86 U.S. App.D.C. 248, 182 F.2d 46, 59 (1950), aff'd per curiam, 341 U.S. 918, 71 S.Ct. 669, 95 L.Ed. 1352 (1950), where the court observed:
>
> > It is next said that the appellant's dismissal impinged upon the rights of free speech and assembly protected by the First Amendment, since the dismissal was premised upon alleged political activity. * * * But the plain hard fact is that so far as the Constitution is concerned there is no prohibition against the dismissal of Government employees because of their political beliefs, activities, or affiliations.
>
> The Bailey court teaches that the sole protection for government employees who have been dismissed for political reasons must be found in civil service statutes or regulations. 447 F.2d at 483.

Therefore, this Court, following the decision in Alomar v. Dwyer, supra, holds that the complaint in the instant case fails to state a claim upon which relief can be granted.

Accordingly, it is hereby ordered, adjudged and decreed that defendants' motion to dismiss is granted.

Dated: May 31, 1972

ENTER:

/s/ WILLIAM J. BAUER,

Judge.

Supreme Court, U. S.
FILED
JUL 10 1975
MICHAEL RODAK, JR., CLERK

No. 74-1520

In the Supreme Court of the United States

OCTOBER TERM, 1973

RICHARD J. ELROD, Individually, and as Sheriff of Cook County, Illinois; THE DEMOCRATIC ORGANIZATION OF COOK COUNTY, a corporation; DEMOCRATIC COUNTY CENTRAL COMMITTEE OF COOK COUNTY and RICHARD J. DALEY, individually, and as President of the Democratic Organization of Cook County and as Chairman of the Democratic County Central Committee of Cook County,

Petitioners,

VS.

JOHN BURNS, FRANK VARGAS, JOSEPH DENNARD, and FRED BUCKLEY, on behalf of themselves and all other persons who were employees of the Sheriff of Cook County on December 7, 1970 and who were not protected by civil service or other laws against arbitrary discharge from their employment,

Respondents.

BRIEF IN OPPOSITION

JOHN C. TUCKER
ROBERT C. KECK, JR.
JENNER & BLOCK
One I.B.M. Plaza
Chicago, Illinois 60611
Attorneys for Respondents

Of Counsel:
DAVID GOLDBERGER
ROGER BALDWIN FOUNDATION
OF ACLU, INC.

UNITED STATES LAW PRINTING CO., CHICAGO, ILLINOIS 60618 (312) 525-6581

INDEX

	PAGE
Statement of the Case	1
Reasons For Denying the Writ	3
I. The Decision Below Involves Narrow Factual Issues Unworthy of Review By This Court	3
II. This Case is Not Ripe For Review By This Court	4
III. The Lewis Decision and the Decision Below are Consistent With Decisions of This Court and of Other Lower Federal Courts	5
Conclusion	8

CITATIONS

Alomar v. Dwyer, 447 F.2d 482 (2d Cir. 1971), cert. denied, 404 U. S. 1020 (1972)	6
Arnett v. Kennedy, 94 S. Ct. 1633 (1974)	4, 5
Bailey v. Richardson, 182 F. 2d 46 (D.C. Cir. 1950), aff'd by an equally divided court, 341 U. S. 918 (1950)	6
Board of Regents v. Roth, 408 U.S. 564 (1972)	6
Gould v. Walker, 856 F. Supp. 421 (N.D. Ill. 1973)	2
Illinois State Employees' Union, et al. v. Lewis, 473 F.2d 561 (7th Cir. 1972), cert. den. 410 U.S. 928, 943 (1973)	2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7
Indiana State Employees' Union v. Negley, 365 F. Supp. 225 (S.D. Ind. 1973), aff'd, 501 F.2d 1239 (7th Cir. 1974)	2

PAGE

Moldawsky v. Lindsay, 341 F. Supp. 1393 (S.D.N.Y. 1972) 5

Norton v. Blaylock, 409 F.2d 772 (8th Cir. 1969) 5

Nunnery v. Barber, 503 F.2d 1349, 1357-1358 (4th Cir. 1974) 2, 5

Perry v. Sindermann, 408 U.S. 593 (1972) 6, 7

Young v. Coder, 346 F. Supp. 165 (M.D. Pa. 1972) 5

In the Supreme Court of the United States

OCTOBER TERM, 1[redacted]

No. 74-1520

RICHARD J. ELROD, Individually, and as Sheriff of Cook County, Illinois; THE DEMOCRATIC ORGANIZATION OF COOK COUNTY, a corporation; DEMOCRATIC COUNTY CENTRAL COMMITTEE OF COOK COUNTY and RICHARD J. DALEY, individually, and as President of the Democratic Organization of Cook County and as Chairman of the Democratic County Central Committee of Cook County,

Petitioners,

vs.

JOHN BURNS, FRANK VARGAS, JOSEPH DENNARD, and FRED BUCKLEY, on behalf of themselves and all other persons who were employees of the Sheriff of Cook County on December 7, 1970 and who were not protected by civil service or other laws against arbitrary discharge from their employment,

Respondents.

BRIEF IN OPPOSITION

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Respondents, four present or former employees of the office of the Sheriff of Cook County, Illinois, filed suit on behalf of themselves and other persons similarly situated against Richard Elrod, individually and as Sheriff of Cook County, the Democratic Organization of Cook County ("The Organization"), The Democratic County Central Committee of Cook County ("The Committee") and Richard Daley, individually and as President of the Organization and Chairman of the Committee.

Respondents' verified complaint and affidavits charged that on or before December 7, 1970, when defendant Elrod, a Democrat, replaced Joseph Woods, a Republican, as Sheriff of Cook County, each of Respondents was employed in the Sheriff's office as a "deputy Sheriff" and that after December 7, 1970 each of Respondents was discharged or threatened with discharge for failing to obtain sponsorship from and actively support the Democratic party. Respondents' complaint sought an injunction against further political firings and reinstatement and damages for those already discharged.

The District Court denied Respondents' Motion for a Preliminary Injunction and thereafter dismissed the complaint for failure to state a claim on which relief could be granted. Respondents appealed both orders to the Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit.

After delaying consideration of the appeal pending the outcome of the petition for certiorari in Illinois State Employees' Union, et al. v. Lewis, 473 F.2d 561 (7th Cir. 1972), cert. den. 410 U.S. 928, 943 (1973) a unanimous panel of the Court of Appeals reversed the orders of the District Court and remanded this cause for trial on the merits. Petitioners' petition for rehearing en banc was denied. A timely petition for writ of certiorari followed.

REASONS FOR DENYING THE WRIT

I.
THE DECISION BELOW INVOLVES NARROW FACTUAL ISSUES UNWORTHY OF REVIEW BY THIS COURT

The decision which petitioners ask this Court to review reversed the dismissal of respondents' complaint and remanded this cause to the District Court for hearing on the merits in order to determine whether the acts complained of fit within the rationale of an earlier Seventh Circuit decision which this Court declined to review.[1]

On September 18, 1972, the Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit rendered its decision in Illinois State Employees' Union, et al. v. Lewis, 473 F.2d 561 (7th Cir. 1972), cert. denied, 410 U.S. 928, 943 (1973) holding that non-policy-making public employees may not be discharged on the basis of their political affiliations. The Lewis case involved "building employees, clerical workers, license examiners and the like" employed in the Illinois Secretary of State's office (473 F.2d at 563). The Lewis decision left the question of its applicability to specific public jobs to future determination on a case-by-case basis. (473 F.2d at 578)

The case at bar is one of several which have considered what constitutes "policy-making and nonpolicy-making" government positions under Lewis.[2] Respondents' Com-

[1] The Court of Appeals also reversed the District Court's denial of plaintiffs' motion for a preliminary injunction.

[2] Other cases include Indiana State Employees' Union v. Negley, 365 F. Supp. 225 (S.D. Ind. 1973) aff'd 501 F.2d 1239 (7th Cir. 1974); Gould v. Walker, 356 F. Supp. 421 (N.D. Ill. 1973); Nunnery v. Barber, 503 F.2d 1349 (4th Cir. 1974).